Interesting Loan.
A Word for Calvin.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE TESTIMONY of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan in Washington interests the country. That the great banker and his partners have paid no income tax during the past two years is not surprising. Losses in that time more than offset earnings with a majority of rich Americans. In 1929, when times were good, the twenty Morgan partners paid to the government eleven millions in income taxes.

WHAT IS really interesting, especially to President Roosevelt, is the fact that the house of Morgan, greatest international banking firm in the world, lent money to Mr. Norman Davis (the money is still owing), who represents, talks and makes promises for the United States at League of Nations meetings in Geneva.

NO ONE doubts that borrowings by Mr. Davis are businesslike and protected by collateral. But the average American would have thought it more fitting if the spokesman for the United States, promising, among other things, that the United States would meddle in future European wars, had NOT borrowed from a banking house with important branches in London and Paris.

TO RECEIVE encouraging, enlightening letters from clergymen is most gratifying.

From South Omaha, Neb., the Rev. Leon C. Hills, D.D., pastor of the Wheeler Memorial Presbyterian Church, writes:

"As you found something good to say, even about Ivan the Terrible, I was wondering if you might not have some kind word to write about John Calvin."

A thousand good things can be said of John Calvin.

Better than any non-Biblical writer he formulated "the duty of man," and in only eight words, "TO KNOW AND DO THE WILL OF GOD."

HIS ADMIRERS regret that John Calvin should have approved the burning alive of the learned Doctor Michael Servetus. And they doubt the statement that Calvin ordered damp wood for the Servetus bonfire "to make the burning last longer."

However, men must be judged by their times and by their intentions. It was customary, in fact it was a sacred duty, to burn your religious enemy in the sixteenth century.

CALVIN AND others believed that Servetus was fighting against the will of God, and Calvin would have preferred that Servetus be beheaded, rather than burned. As to the damp wood, if it was used, Servetus was undoubtedly suffocated at once by the smoke and thus escaped the intense agony of burning.

A LEARNED man, a marvellously hard worker, one "who never deserted a friend," and a devoted Christian was Calvin, convinced that no man's hand had anything to do with the Bible, its very word written by God himself, that all men are responsible for Adam's fall, for which sin and corruption attach to us all.

Sincerity is the great thing and Calvin had it.

IT IS an honor to quote from the Rev. Dr. Hill's letter:

"I desire to have you know how much I appreciate your editorials. I have read practically every one of the short editorials appearing in the syndicated press for a full ten years. I believe I began to read them in May, 1923.

"I may not always agree with you, but you can cause even a preacher to think to a better advantage after reading your clever sentences. I have quoted you frequently in sermons.

"The article entitled 'Human Fish, Looking Upward,' is a masterpiece. One of my boys is using this article in his public school work, seventh grade.

"Several weeks ago you had a few very short editorials inspired by an interview with Count Tolstoy's son. I learned more about the great Tolstoy from those few sentences than I had learned by reading a book or two on the subject.

"Your editorial on 'Ivan the Terrible' was another masterpiece."

A TELEGRAM from William Averill Harriman, of the Union Pacific, announces the "construction of the new passenger train by the Union Pacific, is in line with your thinking. I assume it will interest you."

It is more than interesting, vitally important to transportation, and the future of railroads. The picture shows a streamline, 90-mile-an-hour train, that will be run over the Union Pacific six months hence.

The train, suggesting a very long, white caterpillar, has four sets of wheels supporting three cars, with no visible separation, or division. The whole train, weighing only as much as one ordinary heavy Pullman car, will be made of an aluminum alloy, possessing the strength of ordinary steel, with one-third the weight, or of stainless steel, three times as strong as ordinary steel, requiring only one-third as much metal.

IN THE first of the three sections of the high-speed caterpillar will be a 600-horsepower internal-combustion engine, burning distillate, a fuel non-explosive. In addition to engine, mail car and buffet, the caterpillar unit will carry 116 pas-

3-YEAR-OLD WARD PUT IN CHAINS

Punished for Failing To Learn Prayer, Prober Finds

A 3-year-old Juvenile Court ward, who was unable to pronounce the words of the Lord's Prayer to the satisfaction of her foster mother, was chained on a hot summer afternoon in the attic of her foster home until she was unconscious, an investigator reported to Leo A. Riordan, chief county investigator, today.

This is only one of many additional cases of mistreatment and abuse of county wards which have been reported by county investigators during the last two weeks, Riordan says.

Thorough investigation of every home in which a Juvenile Court ward is placed was urged today by Mrs. Alice Liveright, director of the State Department of Welfare, here to address the Federation of Social Agencies.

Mrs. Liveright asserted the present home finding system is the best for care of the county wards, but there must be proper supervision. She will confer with the County Commissioners.

OLDER GIRL TELLS

The chaining of the 3-year-old girl in the attic was reported to a school principal, who, in turn,

MORGAN QUIZ WRECKS U. S. TAX PLAN

Sales Levy Demanded Instead of Proposed Income Rate Rise

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(INS.)—The sensational disclosures that J. P. Morgan and his 19 multi-millioinaire partners paid not a cent in federal income taxes in 1931 and 1932, and that they paid only $48,000 over a three-year period embracing 1930-32, have all but wrecked the pending tax bill in this Congress.

To say that Congress is shocked puts it mildly. The little coterie of Democratic leaders, mostly representing rural constituencies, who killed the sales tax a year ago, and who turned it down again in the pending bill, are floundering today.

They are wondering how they are going to increase the already high rates in the intermediate brackets, as they intended to do, in the face of the Morgan disclosures.

Moreover, the country has begun to speak. Members of Congress have been showered with telegraphic and mail protests against increased income tax levies since rulers of Wall street admitted in the Senate's banking investigation their escape of all federal income taxes at a time when the "little fellow" was groaning under the highest impost in peacetime history.

BANKER MORGAN IN A SIDE CONFERENCE AT THE SENATE BANKING COMMITTEE HEARINGS

G. O. P. LEADERS SHOWN AS 'FAVORED' CUSTOMERS

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(AP.)—The late former President Calvin Coolidge was shown today in evidence unearthed by the Senate committee investigating J. P. Morgan & Co. to have been a privileged purchaser of 3,000 shares of Standard Brands stocks through the huge banking firm in the middle of 1929.

The stock was offered to Mr. Coolidge a few months after he left the White House and a list of other "select" customers.

The stock was offered at $32 a share. It opened on the New York Stock Exchannge at $40, but later went higher.

There was nothing in the records to show that Mr. Coolidge actually bought the stock but Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate investigating committee, announced that the former President had done so.

Other names on the list of those favored by Morgan in this instance, as introduced while George Whitney—a partner of the firm—testified, included William H. Woodin, now Secretary of the Treasury, 1,000 shares; Norman H. Davis, the Roosevelt ambassador-at-large now in Europe, 500 shares; John W. Davis, former Democratic presidential nominee and counsel for Morgan, 5,000 shares, and various of the Morgan partners.

Woodin was also in the list submitted yesterday of privileged purchasers of Alleghany Corporation stock.

Other testimony showed that since January 1, 1929, the Morgan firm has sold more than $6,000,000,000 in securities to the public.

Gen. John J. Pershing was on the Standard Brands list for 500 shares, having also been on the Alleghany list yesterday. Another name was Charles . Hilles, prominent in New York Republican politics, 2,000 shares.

RASKOB NAMED

Senate investigators also disclosed letters today from John J. Raskob and other prominent figures "thanking" the firm for selling the Alleghany stock under special arrangement.

Meanwhile, Pecora, through questioning Whitney, showed that the bargain sales were made at the same time to Taskob, and Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican national committee.

A letter from Raskob expressing appreciation of "kindly remembering" him and expressing the hope he could reciprocate in the future was placed in the record.

Asked how Raskob could reciprocate Whitney quietly suggested he was chairman of the Democratic committee.

J. P. Morgan himself took the stand just before the noon recess

PINCHOT NAMES WIFE AS PROBER

HARRISBURG, May 25.—(AP.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot has named his wife, Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, as a member of the committee of nine to investigate so-called sweatshop conditions in Pennsylvania.

Other members are Judge Horace Stern, Philadelphia, and Clarence J. Moser, Allentown, appointed by the Governor; Representatives T. J. Gallagher, Allegheny; Eugene J. Gorman, Lehigh, and Roy W. Shreiner, Dauphin, and Senators Richard S. Quigley, Clinton; Clarence J. Buckman, Burks, and Bertram G. Frazier, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Pinchot focused attention on sweatshop conditions in eastern Pennsylvania by marching with child strikers protesting against the working conditions and low wages in textile industries.

Students Frolic Amid Corpses In Morgue

Shrieks mingled with peals of laughter broke the quietness of the Morgue Chapel today until Superintendent John P. Black gave 40 students from an East End school the bum's rush." Thirty girls and 10 boys, seniors and sophomores from the school out on a lark dropped into the Morgue Chapel where the unclaimed victims of violent or sudden deaths are displayed.

Boys pushed the girls to the view cases and, as the girls screamed, the others shouted. When the commotion rached Black he hastened to the chapel, ejected the ringleaders, and ordered the others out.

Back Roosevelt, Schwab's Plea To Steel Men

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP.)—In contrast with the gloom pervading the last annual session, the American Iron and Steel Institute held its 1933 meeting in an atmosphere of confidence and optimism today.

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of Bethlehem Steel Corporation and chairman of the Institute, said present conditions were the reverse of 1932 and the trend is "in the right direction." He urged institute members to support President Roosevelt's program of economic recovery.

William A. Irvin, president of the United States Steel Corporation, said that "the rather liberal demands for steel products during the last six weeks quite clearly indicate the need of the country for replenishment of stocks."

E. G. Grace, Bethlehem's president, said:

"The improvement in steel business is being maintained."

George G. Crawford, president of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, said:

"Our business is substantially better."

Ernest T. Weir, chairman of National Steel Corporation, declared that the improvement in the steel industry which started in April has continued and expanded in an encouraging manner.

Tom M. Girdler, chairman of Republic Steel Corporation, said he looked to the future with "much hope and optimism."

FOES OF HITLER RIOT IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP.)—Rioting broke out today at the North German Lloyd Line pier in Brooklyn in connection with the arrival in America of Hans Weidemann, representative of Adolpf Hitler's German government at the forthcoming World Fair Exposition in Chicago.

A crowd of 1,000 men and women anti-Hitlerites, awaiting the Nazi official, became enraged when it was learned he and an aide had been landed in a tug.

Displaying banners condemning "the Nazi murder and terror regime," the crowds turned on the 50 uniformed police and 30 plainclothesmen, throwing bricks and bottles at them.

Police engaged in hand-to-hand combat with the rioters and after a struggle arrested 13 men and women, the latter wearing red hats.

Hemingway's Sons Escape Crash Injury

HAVANA, May 25.—(AP.)—Mrs. G. Grant Mason, Jr., of Havana and New York, her 3-year-old son, Tony, and John and Patrick Hemingway, sons of Ernest Hemingway, the author, escaped injury at El Cano yesterday as their automobile plunged over a 40-foot embankment, rolling over three times before it came to a stop upside down.

Rescue Woman Trapped Four Days in Bathtub

DENVER, May 25.—(AP.)—Trapped in a bathtub four days, Mrs. Mary Benson, 67, and rather stout, was rescued by police and firemen.

Mrs. Benson, who lives alone, said she became weak while bathing last Sunday and was unable to lift herself from the tub. In her efforts to free herself, she became wedged under the faucets.

Mrs. F. A. Jones, a neighbor, discovered her plight and finally obtained help last night after narrowly escaping arrest. She called the fire department, but in her excitement gave the wrong address. The next time she called, the switchboard operator told her it was a funny story, but not to bother him again or he would turn her over to the police.

Mrs. Jones telephoned a third time from a drug store, but gave no name. A police car was sent and the officers invited her to headquarters for observation. However, she induced them to visit Mrs. Benson's home. The victim was found in the tub. Firemen then responded.

IsDavisMorgan's Envoy at Large? Senator Asks

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(AP.)—In an attack in the Senate today on Norman H. Davis, ambassador-at-large to Europe, for his speech on consultative pacts, Senator Robinson (Rep.), of Indiana, referred to revelations in the Morgan inquiry and asked if Davis was representing the house of Morgan in Europe.

It was the first reference to the Morgan investigation on the Senate floor and was precipitated by Senator Long (Dem.) of Louisana, after Robinson had concluded on arrangment of Davis for his speech at Geneva saying America would consult with Europe when peace was threatende. He said:

"I don't believe the Senator has been reading the newspapers. Davis might be there for the house of Morgan and he might be there for England as well."

Robinson then referred to the testimony before the Senate Banking Committee that Davis was one of scores who borrowed from J. P. Morgan & Co. and was also on a list of "favored" customers permitted to buy stock at cost and below market prices.

MORGAN'S TAX PAPERS PROBED

NEW YORK, May 25.—(INS.)—Income tax returns filed by J. P. Morgan and his partners in recent years are under scrutiny by internal revenue agents under Joseph R. Bardel at the customs house, it was learned today. No further information was offered.

WASHINGTON, May 25—(INS.)—Immediate amendment of the income tax laws to prevent such avoidance of income taxes as disclosed in the Morgan investigation was approved by the House Ways and Means Committee today.

The change, which would limit the taking of capital losses on income tax returns to the year in which the loss was incurred, will be proposed in the House as an addition to the industriay recovery bill.

City Employes Join Strike in Chicago

CHICAGO, May 25.—(AP.)—Street sweepers and garbage collectors began walking away from their jobs today in sympathy with a strike by the Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union against the city.

Convict's Crippled Baby Aided by Henry Ford

DETROIT, May 25.—(INS.)—The vast business empire of Henry Ford got along without his attention today, while the motor magnate came to the aid of a crippled baby, whose father is in the penitentiary.

James (Bunny) Dawson, 11 months old, was an honored guest in Ford hospital today, attended by dozens of nurses and doctors eager to carry out the wishes of "the old man."

Dr. Roy D. McClure, who recently operated on Ford himself, will operate on "Bunny's" crippled foot, so the child may walk.

Ford also will supply "Bunny's" mother, Mrs. Nettie Dawson, with a job.

"Bunny's" father, Brookie Dawson, was sent to Jackson prison when he was 18 after a boyhood adventure in crime. For years he was a model prisoner, a trusty. Then, a few weeks before his scheduled parole, he learned that his sister was dying of tuberculosis in Detroit.

Dawson escaped. He reached his sister's bedside a few hours before she died. For five years he lived the life of a free man and a good citizen. He married and settled down in Peekskill, N. Y.

Then came the depression and Dawson had no job. With his wife and baby he wandered about the country, finally returning in desperation to his home town of River Rouge to seek the help of friends.

He was recognized, arrested, and returned to the prison, leaving his wife and baby penniless.

Various moves to get him a parole or pardon have been started, but Parole Commissioner W. Alfred Debo is not in favor of freeing him.

Whitney Defense Of 'Czar' Morgan Enrages Pecora

By EDWIN C. HILL

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—"We don't think that common stocks should be sold publicly—or by us, at least, for the reason that they get into the hands of people who don't know what they are buying."

That statement made on the witness stand of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee this afternoon by George Whitney—"Icicle" Whitney—principal spokesman for J. P. Morgan and the great Morgan private bank—cast an instant sensation and will have an earthquake reverberation in every stock market in the land.

Senators stiffened in their seats and blinked in amazement as young Whitney—obviously the right-hand man of the overman of Wall street—threw out, in powerful inference, the deliberate opinion that unrestricted sales of common stock to the uninformed and credulous is a dangerous proceeding.

Whitney, keen and composed under a terrific attack by Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate committee, went on from that astonishing statement to a shrewd and psychologically clever defense of the whole field and scope of the financial operations of the inquiry into his firm to explain his testimony of yesterday that he paid income taxes in England during 1931 and 1932 when he paid nothing in the United States.

M'ADOO DEFENDS DEALS WITH BANKER, SAYS HE LOST MONEY

He explained that England did not permit deductions for capital losses that were permitted in this country, adding that he had tried to observe the laws of both countries.

Senator William Gibbs McAdoo (Dem.), of California, also on the special Allegheny list, formally denied that he was a "preferred client" of Morgan.

He submitted figures to show he had lost $2,565 on three purchases he had been invited to make by the Morgans, although he disclosed a $4,900 profit on the 500 shares of Allegheny stock he had been allowed to buy.

McAdoo's defense of his transactions with the Morgan firm marked the opening of today's session. When McAdoo concluded, Pecora questioned Whitney about the sale of the Alleghany stock to a special list, including McAdoo and Woodin.

NOISE IN HALL

There was so much noise in the hall that Chairman Fletcher shouted:

"Keep quiet or get out. All these chairs scraping makes it sound like a railroad train going through the hall."

Pecora asked Whitney whether Morgan & Co. had any list of "the names of close friends who were given an opportunity to subscribe to various issues."

Whitney said:

"No, sir."

He then asked permission to "clear up some of the things I said yesterday."

He said that the trading in Alleghany Corporation stock before February 15, 1929, was a "when issued basis." He added:

"The stock was selling around 35, I think, but it wasn't listed till February 15."

Pecora asked if any restrictions were placed by Morgan & Co. on the Alleghany stock sold its favored clients.

Whitney said:

"There were no strings."

CHANCE FOR PROFIT

Pecora asked:

"Then these purchasers could have taken advantage of that market to make a substantial profit?

Whitney said:

"They could have on that market. But in the great majority of cases the offer was made and accepted before any market existed at all."

Senator Couzens commented:

"But it was much more tempting in the letter to Secretary Woodin."

Then ensued a sharp tilt between John W. Davis, Morgan counsels, and Pecora on correspondence relating to favored customers.

Davis said he thought the examiners, in the "three months they went through these files, got what they wanted."

Pecora said he had asked the Morgan firm to produce letters which his examiners had been unable to get.

Pecora asserted:

"The firm of Morgan & Co. denied us permission to remain in their offices until 12 o'clock—the only firm which denied us this privilege."

Senator Byrnes (Dem.), of South Carolina, asked:

"What is wanted?"

Pecora said:

"All letters relating to offers of participation in the Alleghany Corporation issue, the General Motors issue, Standard Brands and Johns-Manville. The Alleghany list has been made public but the others have not gone into the record."

DISPUTES PECORA

Davis disputed Pecora's interpretation of the examination of the Morgan files vigorously. He said:

"We will furnish what is wanted if we are told what it is."

Senator Byrnes asked:

"The files are too bulky?"

Davis said:

"Exactly. The investigators of Mr. Pecora had all these files. If the committee wants all this correspondence files relating to this subject they will be produced. But I feel the request ought to come from the chairman of the committee."

Senator Glass said:

"I don't think the implication should remain on the record that Morgan & Co. withheld any records."

Couzens said:

"I think Pecora should submit a list of the correspondence wanted."

Pecora charged that because of the time limitation imposed on his investigators by J. P. Morgan & Co. "they weren't able to make the kind of investigation the examiners wanted to make."

DAVIS REPLIES

Pecora caused a protest by Davis when he said "sometimes days elapsed before we would get a photostatic copy of correspondence desired, though the photostatic machine was right in the office.

The Morgan counsel replied:

"That calls for a reply from me."

He added that the firm had supplied complete answers to a list of 23 questions submitted by Pecora.

Whitney broke in:

"When his investigators came into the office they were furnished with a commodious room for work. Our staff was occupied at night satisfying additional requests made every day by Mr. Pecora.

"I told him it would be unfair to our men assigned to assist him to have them work with his investigators up until midnight and then work the rest of the night fulfilling his other requests.

"It was reported to me that his complaint about the photostats had no real foundation. In my humble judgment, the cooperation with the examiners could not possibly have been exceeded."

Whitney was allowed to buy 14,000 shares of the Alleghany stock at $20, and testified today he had made a profit of $146,250 when he sold the same.

WHITNEY MAKES PROFIT

Questioned by Senator Barkley, Whitney explained his participation in the Alleghany issue. He said he acquired 14,260 shares at a cost of $285,500. He said:

"I sold about 6,000 shares in July, 1929, and 2,000 in September.

"In 1930 I sold about 4,000 shares and later 2,000 more, and I still hold about 115 shares. My gross profit was $146,250."

Then Whitney discussed the Morgan company relations with the Van Sweringens, who formed the Alleghany Corporation.

He said the Van Sweringens, railroad operators, were trying to consolidate eastern roads. He said:

"They first formed the Chesapeake Corporation and acquired the Chesapeake and Ohio. The wisdom of this has been shown by the fact that the Chesapeake and Ohio is still one of the roads that is paying dividends.

"We believed the consolidation in public interests. We had been bankers for the Van Sweringens for many years. We had no interest in any of the stocks they acquired in railroads, with one minor exception."

FIRM SOLD BONDS

He added that the Van Sweringens acquired the Pere Marquette after the Morgan firm had helped sell bonds of the Chesapeake Corporation. He said:

"They desired to consolidate their holdings. They decided to form the Alleghany Corporation for this purpose."

The scraping of chairs on the marble floor made a continuous squeaking accompaniment to the testimony. Morgan scanned a copy of the statement which Whitney read.

Senator Glass broke in:

"Put it in the record, we are wasting too much time."

Whitney wanted to "read two more paragraphs."

The Virginia Senator said:

"I've no objection. But your voice is mingled with the scraping of these chairs. We might as well be in a railroad shop."

Whitney said:

"When the idea of forming the Alleghany Corporation originated, they asked us about the financial structure."

He went ahead to discuss in a calm voice how the Van Sweringens had turned in their holding and accepted common stock, "with $60,000,000 of obligations above them." He added:

"We sold $35,000,000 of bonds for which we believed there was a substantial base. The Guaranty Company took $25,000,000 of preferred. We bought $25,000,000 of the common stock.

"We believed in the future of the firm but did not consider it good banking to keep $25,000,000 of common stock in our portfolio. So we offered it to men of financial judgment that they might make a profit over a long period as we hoped to do, but not just with the idea of throwing it on the market the next day.

"These lists were formed of people we knew, knew enough to know what they were doing. We handle what we call sound security. We don't think common stock ought to be sold to the public by Morgan & Co., because we are afraid it might get into the hands of people who don't know what they are doing."

Whitney emphasized that Morgan dealings with the Van Sweringens were confined to railroads and did not include "any real estate in Cleveland."

BONDS SOLD BY FIRM

Whitney testified that industrial bonds and preferred stock sold to the public since the war by Morgan and now outstanding were offered at the average price of 99.28. The average current market price on May 11, 1933, was 99.07. There has been no default in payment of principal or interest on these bonds or in the regular payment of dividends on the preferred stock.

Public offerings of municipal bonds by the Morgan company were placed at $160,000,000. Of these, $1,000,000 have been retired and the balance remains outstanding. The average public offering price was 101.64. The average current market price on May 11 was 82.83. None of these bonds is in default in the payment of principal or interest.

Railroad Holding Company bonds offered to the public by the Morgan firm since January 1, 1919, Whitney placed at $133,000,000. Of these $11,968,000 have been retired. The balance, $121,032,000, are selling substantially below the public offering price, said Whitney.

The average public offering price of these bonds was 97.25 and the average current market price on May 11, 1933, was 50.94, a decline of about 46.5. The witness also stated that none of these bonds as yet is in default in the payment of principal or interest.

Whitney declared that J. P. Morgan & Co. employ no bond sales, and "have never adopted any methods of high pressure salesmanship."

RASKOB 'THOUGHTFUL'

Pecora placed in the record a letter from the former Democratic National Chairman, John J. Raskob, thanking the Morgan firm for remembering him in the special sale of Alleghany stock and saying he hoped the future would "offer me a chance to reciprocate."

Pecora asked:

"How could he reciprcate?"

Whitney asked in reply:

"Didn't he have something to do with the Democratic national committee."

Pecora pointed out that at the same time the stock was offered to Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican national committee.

Whitney verified the sale but said he did not know whether he was treasurer at the time.

Senator Byrnes commented:

"The difference was that he was offered 3,000, instead of 2,000."

Couzens commented:

"I never heard of anybody so altrustic."

Whitney rejoined:

"It was not a question of altruism."

Couzens asked:

"You hoped past pleasant relations would continue by giving these men a profit?"

Whitney said:

"I wouldn't want to say we tried to make them unfriendly. Perhaps my first answer was too strong. We wanted to continue our relationship. That list shows that many were just personal friends. Whether it made them more friendly or less friendly—well, I hope they all made a profit."

SUGGESTED RASKOB

Pecora asked who suggested Raskob for the list. Whitney said:

"I think I did."

"Did you write to him about participating?"

"My recollection is that I telephoned."

"Did you receive an acceptance?"

"I did."

Pecora then read what was identified as a copy of Raskob's letter to Whitney. It was dated February 4, 1929, at Balm Beach, Fla., and began:

"Dear George."

The letter expressed "many thanks" to Whitney for his "trouble" in "kindly remembering me." It said a check for $40,000 was enclosed and that Raskob accepted "the many opportunities offered to me by you and your partners."

Pecora went down the list naming C. N. Bliss as a "former treasurer of the Republican National Campaign Committee" and Charles D. Hilles, of New York, as a former chairman of the Republican committee.

QUIZZED ON HILLES

"Whose friend was Hilles?"

Whitney replied:

"All the older partners, particularly Dwight Morrow."

Pecora commented:

Whitney nodded:

"Yes."

As in previous sessions special police and secret service men were scattered about the committee room.

One plainclothes man was assigned to guard Pecora and his files while another was attached to Morgan.

Spectators were admitted to the room freely as long as there were seats, but all packages were closely watched.

Senator Byrnes asked about Charles A. Lindbergh's participation in stock purchases. Whitney said he was introduced by Dwight W. Morrow, later his father-in-law.

Whitney said:

"We have advised him on his affairs since."

One of the next names Pecora asked about was Michael G. Herbert and Whitney identified him as the son of the former ambassador from Great Britain.

Senator Goldsborough (Rep.), of Maryland, objected to linking names on the list to political parties. He said:

"We are not engaged in a political vaudeville."

Senator Couzens said:

STRAWN IDENTIFIED

After identifying Silas Strawn as a former head of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Pecora asked Whitney if he knew the chamber recently had opposed the securities regulation bill.

Whitney said:

"I didn't know it."

In the testimony as to issuance of securities by the Morgan firm, Whitney declared that "of the issues now in default, namely bonds of the Florida East Coast Railway, and of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, and the Missouri Pacific, we ourselves purchased and still hold bonds of those issues or of issues junior to them on which our aggregate losses, based upon the difference between our purchase price and the present market value, are greatly in excess of the profit that we made from these offerings.

MORGAN PROBE TO SPUR BANK REFORMS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Debate on the Glass banking reform bill was begun today in the Senate, with amazing disclosures in the J. P. Morgan & Co. investigation lending impetus to the demand for more stringent banking laws.

One of the bill's provisions, inserted with the express approval of President Roosevelt, would compel the house of Morgan and other private banks to give up either their deposit business or their securities dealings within two years.

Despite the expressed opposition of the powerful Morgan, this provision found strong Senate support.

A similar divorce of commercial banks from their security affiliates within the same length of time also was strongly backed in the Senate.

The insurance guaranty plan approved by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee was a focal point of attack, a number of Senators seeking to make this guaranty effective immediately rather than a year hence.

Senate approval of the provision for statewide branch banking by Federal Reserve member banks in all states permitting this form of banking by their own financial houses was in prospect.

No such provision was inserted in the Steagall banking reform bill overwhelmingly approved by the House. In general, however, Steagall's measure coincided closely with the one offered by Senator Glass (Dem.), of Virginia.

sengers, more than are usually carried by six Pullman cars.

CO-OPERATING with the Union Pacific and Mr. Harriman in producing this high-speed transportation caterpillar, is Mr. Crawford, president of the Pullman Company; Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., head of General Motors, and William P. Stout, the aeronautical engineer.

Congratulations to all concerned, not forgetting the late E. H. Harriman, who built a roadbed that need not fear high speed. He would have liked to see that 110-mile-an-hour caterpillar.

YOU HAVE seen in this column many suggestions that competition of motor buses and airplanes should be met with railroad trains of this kind.

You will hear more about such trains, before long, from Gen. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania, President Williamson, of the New York Central, and other active railroad men. Both the Pennsylvania and the New York Central report increased traffic and better receipts.

THERE ARE modern variations of the prodigal son story. A rugged farmer, asked whether he had killed the fatted calf when his erring son returned, replied:

"No, but I darn near killed him."

Now, Henry Goldberg, in the neckwear business, tells the police a new and sad prodigal son story. His son came back with three friends, and invited him, the father, to subscribe to a racketeering organization, that would charge him "only $5,000 a year" for protection.

When the father declined, the prodigal son and his friends proceeded to wreck the father's flat and destroy the furniture.

"ARE TIMES improving? Are conditions more cheerful? Do you expect better business?"

Wall Street answers emphatically YES, in the only language that Wall Street knows, higher prices.

"There is always a "but." While stock prices went up, the dollar, in foreign countries, went down. British pounds and French francs were worth more in our money yesterday than the day before, which means that the dollar was worth less.

ANOTHER "BUT." Remember that, for the present, barring unexpected and inconceivable foolishness, the best kind of money in the world is AMERICAN MONEY.

With that money you can buy anything in the United States, now or hereafter. He who can't find in the United States all that he wants is hard to please. The value of money depends on WHAT IT CAN BUY.

3-YEAR-OLD GIR WARD CHAINED IN ATTIC

Punished for Failu To Learn Prayer, Prober Finds informed Juvenile Court autho ties.

The wards were removed fr the home, but no action was tak to prosecute the foster parent f the abuse of the small girl, Ric dan said.

The incident happened la June, according to the report submitted to Riordan. Another wa a 16-year-old girl, told her scho principal that the smaller ch had been forgotten while in t attic and was unconscious wh found by the foster mother.

NOT ON PROBATION RECOR

Probation office records r vealed by Miss Grace Stoak chief officer, failed to show t charge involving the chain. S questioned Miss K. Carroll, co visitor, who had closed the hor after receiving reports from school principal that the childr were unhappy.

She said her complaint relat that the children were forced sleep in an unfinished third floo Miss Carroll said she made a unexpected night visit to t house last June, found two old children sleeping in the hot att but that the 3-year-old ward w sleeping in the foster mothe second floor bedroom. The hon was immediately closed becau of the third floor sleeping conditions, she said.

Riordan said he planned bring this case to the attentio of the County Commissione when they meet sometime duri the next week with the judg of the County Court and Juveni Court authorities to discuss t investigation which to date h revealed many cases of attac on wards, abuse and general u satisfactory conditions.

STUDY IN STREET

Another case reaching Riorda within the last few days concern the foster home in which s wards were maintained. The wards were kept out of school much as a week or 10 days a time to do housework he say

The foster parents, the repo states, conducted a rooming hou in another section of the ci from their own home and t wards were forced to clean t rooming house at regular inte vals. During the time they work in the rooming house they sle in a pantry on a cot, Riorda says.

In the house where the s wards were maintained conditio also were unsatisfactory, the r port states. The light compan shut off the electric light servi for non-payment of bills and th children were forced to stud their school work in the stree under the street lights, Riorda declared. This home still is ope ating, Riordan said.

SLEPT IN PANTRY

Regarding this foster hom Miss Stoakes said it was bein closed after an investigation mad during the last week by Mrs. Ma D. Gardner, court visitor. Th latter was questioned about th investigators' report. She said th children informed her they volunteered to go to the rooming hous and help the foster mother. Onl one girl slept at that house ove night, Mrs. Gardner said it wa learned.

This girl told the visitor tha she preferred to sleep on the co in the pantry rather than share room upstairs with the foste mother, Mrs. Gardner claime While the home conditions wer excellent, Mrs. Gardner said, was being closed because the foster parent failed to notify th court of her conducting the rooming house, even at another address. She admitted the girl work at the rooming house ha caused absence from school.

BEATEN WITH STRAP

Among the latest reports submitted is one in which a foste parent is accused of beating th court ward with a strap.

A present foster mother also i named as having beat her war with a dustpan and it was necessary to take the child to a physician for medical attention.

Lax medical supervision of th wards was once more brought t light when reports indicate tha there are cases of wards sufferin from tuberculosis that are permitted to sleep in poorly ventilated rooms.

In one home where the child i suffering from tuberculosis, it wa said that the only income in th home was the money receive from the county for the maintenance of the child.

Rodgers Says Rosendahl Saved Akron in Gale

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(AP.)—Stormy Barnegat Bay, danger spot to Atlantic sailing masters, almost claimed the Akron on one other occasion before she was wrecked there in a thunderstorm last month and all but three of her crew lost.

The occasion was related yesterday to a joint congressional committee by Lieut. Com. B. J. Rodgers, gunnery officer of the new "Macon" and an officer on both the Akron and the Los Angeles. He testified:

"About a year and a half ago we ran into a storm over Barnegat at about the same place the Akron was lost. Capt. Charles E. Rosendahl was in command."

The commander lay the ship to, hoping to wait out a storm proceeding up the coast from Washington, he said, continuing:

"But there were some clearings—lighter spots in the sky—and we decided to go through and get on the safe side of the storm, or the western semi-circle of the storm area. We went through at 60 knots without any trouble."

The same situation was encountered by the Los Angeles Rodgers said, but she escaped by running 250 miles out to sea.

Lieut. Rodgers is a son of Mrs Clara E. Rodgers, of 310 Orchar avenue, Knoxville, and frequently passed over Pittsburgh in the Akron and Los Angeles. It was hi custom to signal his mother whe the big ships passed over Pittsburgh. He was assigned to the Macon last March.

THREE SEEN IN CONTEST FOR PRESBYTERIAN MODERATOR

MOONEY TURNS TO SUPREME COURT

By RALPH B. JORDAN
International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—The internationally famous Tom Mooney legal drama, after another spectacular episode in the California courts, today was billed for the "top spot" in America—Washington and the United States Supreme Court.

Frank P. Walsh, New York lawyer and chief of Mooney's defense battery, was on his way east by airplane to prepare the way for the case to be presented before the highest tribunal in another effort to free Mooney from San Quentin prison, where he is serving a life sentence for participation in the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing here.

And as an auxiliary enterprise, another application for a pardon will be presented to Gov. James Rolph, Jr., according to Mooney's attorneys. But this would seem more in the nature of a gesture, as Rolph, as well as the other California governors since Mooney's conviction, has turned thumbs down already on a pardon.

DEFENSE ARGUMENT

Walsh and Leo Gallagher, also of Mooney's staff, issued a statement that Mooney will seek a writ of habeas corpus from the high court, based upon his perfunctory acquittal on a murder charge here yesterday and the consequent allegation that he is being imprisoned in violation of the federal constitution.

The defense relies, it was learned, upon the contention that the bomb explosion, which killed 10 persons, was "one criminal transaction," and that Mooney could not be both guilty and innocent of the crime, as in the paradoxical situation now, he having been found guilty in 1917 on an indictment charging the death of one of the victims and not guilty yesterday on another indictment setting forth the death of another victim.

Also, the defense claims, there is ample legal precedent that where two or more judgments obtain on the same crime the last shall be effective, and the last judgment on Mooney—yesterday's directed verdict of acquitttal — leaves him clothed in innocence in the eyes of the law.

DRAMATIC TRIAL

His trial on the long dormant indictment was short and packed with drama yesterday.

Choosing of the jury was completed and William W. Murphy, assistant district attorney, immediately rested for the state and asked Superior Judge Louis H. Ward to direct a not guilty verdict on the ground that the state could not put on a case and conscientiously ask for a conviction.

Mooney brought a gasp of surprise from the crowded courtroom by rising from his place at the counsel table and announcing that he wanted to conduct his own defense. Judge Ward said:

"You have beside you one of the ablest lawyers in America" —referring to Walsh—"and also another capable attorney," meaning Gallagher.

"Furthermore, ninety-nine out of a hundred defendants who conduct their own cases make fools of themselves."

Mooney whispered a moment with his attorneys and then made known his decision. He said evenly:

"I will conduct my own defense."

POPE BLESSES ROME THRONG

ROME, May 25.—(AP.)—Pope Pius blessed a vast crowd, estimated at 300,000 persons, when he left the Vatican and attended mass at the Bascilica of St. John Lateran, the "mother church" of the Roman Catholic World, today.

The Pope's departure from the Vatican marked the resumption of an Ascension Day custom abandoned in 1870 as a result of the voluntary imprisonment of the pontiff. His Holiness was ordained a priest at St. John Lateran 54 years ago.

The blessing was pronounced from a balcony of the basilica draped with a rich damask hanging. The thousands in the square greeted the pontiff with cries of "Viva il Papa!"

At the conclusion of the visit the Pope re-entered his automobile, the windows of which were down, and, as the crowd cheered, he drove across the square and took a circuitous route back to the Vatican.

The pontiff went to St. John Lateran as an ordinary Holy Year pilgrim.

Victims' Modesty Helps Gas Bandits

MUSKOGEE, Okla., May 25.—(AP.)—Modesty permitted two filling station robbers to escape with $30 here. The robbers forced the attendants to undress, threw their clothing in the street and drove away. The attendants, clad only in shoes stayed put. Passersby returned their clothes.

GANG SHOOTS 3 ON BROADWAY

NEW YORK, May 25.—(INS.)—Two women and a man, innocent wayfarers in fashionable upper Broadway, were shot and wounded seriously early today when wildly firing gangsters converted the street into a battlefield.

Two black sedans and a truck, all laden with gunmen, ploughed through Broadway from Eighty-first street to Eighty-fourth, just as theaters were emptying the audiences of their midnight shows into the streets, striking panic among the crowds.

It was all over in a few minutes. When the gangsters' jaugernauts had passed two women and a man were lying in the street. They were:

Miss Irene Savage, 24, and Sadie Fortine 35, both of fashionable West End avenue, and Walter O'Donald, of Hornell, N. Y. Miss Savage was shot in the shoulder. Miss Fortine was shot in the back, and O'Donald in the forehead. The latter two are in critical condition.

Armstrong's Widow Feels Like Million Dollars, She Says

They both made that announcement today as they spent their honeymoon in the Miami penthouse they've leased for a year. In fact, the former Pittsburghers intend to build a house and live here permanently.

Mrs. Lauinger, who was made a widow for the third time when Joseph G. Armstrong, Pittsburgh politician, died, had this to say.

"We're spending our time very simply. Fishing, gardening, motoring and planning the future."

'Doomed' by Science, Troy Hill Wife Dies

Mrs. Esther O'Connor, 37, died in her home at 2063 Vine street, Troy Hill, a few hours after doctors at the Allegheny General Hospital told her medical science had no cure for her disease.

Mrs. O'Connor entered the hospital early this month for observation.

RELIEF AIDING SWEAT SHOPS, SAYS AGENT

Head of Industrial Relations Bureau Hits Martin

Relief funds are being used to subsidize sweatshops and coal mines, Stephen Raushenbush, head of the State Bureau of Industrial Relations, said today on his arrival here to address a mass meeting tonight.

He said employers were paying less than a living wage, and employes were able to subsist only because they were receiving relief funds in some sections of the state in addition to their wages. He said employers had threatened to cut workers off from relief if they dared to strike.

With a blast at Republican State Chairman Edward Martin's statement here Monday that there are adequate laws to prevent sweatshop conditions, Raushenbush said he defied Gen. Martin to find a way to raise wages of 50 cents or a dollar a week by invoking the present hours laws or sanitary laws. The state has no minimum wage law.

Denying that he wished to pose as a "martyr," Raushenbush said that nevertheless, his activity as secretary of the State Security League and the aid his department gave the workers cost him his job as head of the Industrial Relations Bureau.

Raushenbush will speak at 8 o'clock tonight at the Second Presbyterian Church.

The Retail Forum here last night voted to urge all retail associations in Allegheny County to refrain from purchasing merchandise made under sweatshop conditions and in violation of the child labor law. The resolution was presented by Edgar J. Kaufmann at the second annual dinner of the forum in McCreery's after Judge Benjamin Lencher had spoken on the evils of the sweatshop system.

KERR OPPOSES SUBWAY PLAN

Efforts to build a downtown subway met with opposition today from City Controller James P. Kerr.

To build the subway at this time would necessitate, in Dr. Kerr's opinion, the "worst piece of financing the city has ever undertaken."

The Controller also sees the city's bonding power exhausted if the city pledges its credit to the amount necessary.

Dr. Kerr also said that he has received information from Thomas C. McMahon, chief city assessor, to the effect that property assessments will be reduced by $200,000,000 during the triennial assessment.

CLOSE UP LINKS, COUNTY URGED

County Commissioners have been asked to close the county park golf courses for this season by the taxation committee of the Building Owners and Managers Association.

In a letter, accompanying the resolution which asks that the courses be closed immediately, J. W. Bamford, chairman of the committee, states that the only way in which the situation can be corrected is to instruct the Director of Parks A. M. Marion to economize.

The golf courses must be self-supporting, as the real estate taxpayer cannot afford to keep them up, Bamford says. He declares there will be a large deficit at the end of the year if the links are allowed to operate under present conditions.

TAKES POISON AFTER QUARREL

Mrs. Betty Worthing, 32, lay in a serious condition in Allegheny General Hospital today after swallowing poison following, so her daughter said, a quarrel with a friend.

The friend, Howard Buffington, 32, a roomer in the Worthing home at 902 East Diamond street, threatened to leave, whereupon Mrs. Worthing took poison, the daughter, Pauline Worthing, 17, testified in North Side Police Court.

Buffington was held over after a hearing today.

MARLENE DONS SKIRTS IN PARIS

PARIS, May 25.—(Universal.)—Marlene Dietrich, advocate of mannish attire for Hollywood film stars and all other women, returned to skirts yesterday and had to seek the protection of a blushing, trousered French gendarme.

Marlene's reappearance in women's garb put a halt to a story that had Paris society buzzing. It was that friends, encountering Marlene in men's clothing, asked her whether she dressed that way for her husband at home. She is said to have replied:

"Heavens, no! Do you think I want to lose him?"

Trust Company Wins Suit Over Property

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 25.—A verdict for the Washington Trust Company, in the suit of the heirs of Dr. George W. Roberts, was returned here. The plaintiffs contended that Dr. Roberts was mentally incompetent to sell the property on which the trust company building is located. The deal was made about 30 years ago. The bank produced the deed signed by Dr. Roberts and his wife before Roberts was confined to Dixmont Hospital.

Ruth Elder's 'Ex,' Lyle Womack, Weds

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—(AP.)—Lyle E. Womack, former husband of Ruth Elder, the aviatrix, was married last night to Miss E. Louise Tucker, as the climax of a romance which Womack said "began in front of a lion cage."

He first saw Miss Tucker among the spectators when he was lecturing at a lion farm. They will leave next Friday for Balboa Heights, Canal Zone, where they will live.

State, Balked in Coyne Bride Slaying, Rests

The commonwealth rested shortly before noon today in a surprise move in the case against John Coyne, Jr., 25, on trial in Criminal Court for the fatal shooting on her wedding day of Irene Carbert Coyne, 19, his father's bride.

But two commonwealth witnesses had been heard when Assistant District Attorney B. Meredith Reid rested the prosecution.

Edith Carbert, 14, of 5232 Lytle street, a sister of the dead bride, had just completed her testimony that she saw young Coyne shoot her sister while in the kitchen of the Coyne home.

Reid, explaining his decision to call no more witnesses, said:

"It has become apparent that the other witnesses we had intended to call will not give the testimony that had been anticipated."

Charles J. Margiotti, attorney for the defense, demanded that the state call two other eye-witnesses of the shooting, John Coyne, Sr., and his best man, Michael Diskin.

Judge Norman T. Boose ruled that the court has no right to tell the commonwealth what witnesses to call.

Edith Carbert, who seems to form the commonwealth's entire case, said she saw John Coyne, Jr., appear in the dining room door. She said Coyne told Irene to get out and stay out, and then shot before she had time to heed his command.

She said the best man, Diskin, was not in the kitchen at the time of the shooting.

A bridesmaid, Miss Marie McLeer, 27, was recalled today and given a severe grilling by Reid on her statement that the shooting occurred during a struggle between Diskin and young Coyne.

Blonde's Death Trial May Reach Jury Today

Girl Grilled Hours In Killing of Sweetheart

JERSEY CITY, N. J., May 25.—(AP.)—The fate of blonde Dolly Lumpkin, former Baltimore resident who is on trial for murder as the result of the fatal shooting of her married sweetheart may be placed in the hands of a jury today.

Although the defense plans to call as many as 15 witnesses before it completes its picture of the fatal wounding of Thomas Plakstis, 28, last October 27, indications are that the jury will be asked to reach a verdict late this afternoon.

Fisher Passes 61st Birthday at Desk

Former Gov. John S. Fisher was celebrating his sixty-first birthday today by working, as usual, at his desk in the office of the National Fire Insurance Company, of which he is president. Recently he was named president of the Chamber of Commerce.

BIRTH CONTROL 'GAG' URGED

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(AP.)—A report recommending that on such controversial questions as birth control, war and peace, and the social relationship of young people, the Federal Council of Churches should not be allowed to speak for Northern Baptists, was placed today before the convention of that church.

G. W. Taft, of Chicago, chairman of the committee that studied the subject, presented a recommendation that the Baptists continue to affiliate with the Federal Council but with specific limitations, rigorously enforced, on the subjects on which the Council can speak. His report said:

"Birth control is a point of controversy and division concerning which each denomination affiliated with the Federal Council is far from being united within itself. Your committee therefore advises that so far as the Northern Baptists convention is concerned, the Federal Council shall make no statement whatsoever for it."

Taft's report termed the publication of a book titled "Young People's Relationships" by the Federal Council a "blunder" of a type not likely to occur again.

MISSION ROW THREATENS REVOLT

Ultra - Fundamentalist Group Demands 'Reform'

COLUMBUS, O., May 25.—(AP.)—A three-cornered contest was in prospect today for the office of moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America as the denomination opened its one hundredth and forty-fifth general assembly.

The triangular aspect was disclosed with word from sources considered authoritative that the name of Dr. Joseph M. Broady, of Birmingham, Ala., would be placed in nomination.

THIRD CANDIDATE

Previously, leaders had predicted only two nominations—Dr. John McDowell, of New York City, and an unnamed candidate of the extreme fundamantalist group. This candidate possibly would be the Rev. Frank Ray Elder, of Cincinnati.

Today official sources disclosed that Dr. McDowell had refused to allow his name to be placed in nomination by the Rev. Mark Mathews, of Seattle, and that Mr. Matthews would nominate Dr. Broady.

Although both Dr. McDowell and Dr. Broady are considered fundamentalists, in the broader sense of the word, neither is acceptable to the ultra-fundamentalist section headed by Dr. J. Gresham Machem and the Rev. H. McAlester Griffiths, both of Philadelphia, recognized leaders of the militant fundamentalists.

OPPOSE M'DOWELL

They have attacked Mr. McDowell repeatedly because of his connection as secretary of the Board of National Missions.

The extreme fundamentalists have demanded that missionaries be selected from those committed to liberal interpretations of the scriptures. Criticism of missionaries in the field, including the authoress Mrs. Pearl Buck, who resigned, has been voiced by Dr. Machen.

One of the fundamentalists, who declined to be quoted, predicted that unless "reforms" they seek in the missions board are obtained they will form a new board.

60 Ministers Here Urge Missionary 'Safeguards'

Sixty ministers of the presbytery of Pittsburgh have sent a memorial to the one hundred and forty-fifth General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church asking the General Assembly to safeguard the missionary interests of the church. The announcement of the action said the ministers were disturbed by the report of conditions in connection with the foreign missionary work.

'NINI' WITNESS DELAYS TRIAL

NEWPORT, R. I., May 25.—(INS.)—A recess until tomorrow in the trial of the cross-divorce suits of F. Frazier Jelke, 52-year-old New York broker, and his wife, Mrs. Eugenia Woodward Jelke, was declared today to allow Mrs. Ethel Hartman, proprietor of a Birmingham, Ala., apartment house, time to arrive and testify for Mrs. Jelke.

It was in her apartment, according to witness for Jelke, that Mrs. Jelke was seen with the mysterious southern "major." Mrs. Jelke said she was not at the apartment and knew no "major."

New York Socialite Gets Reno Divorce

RENO, Nev., May 25.—(INS.)—Natalie Bunce, socially prominent in New York City, today had been granted a divorce from Carleton Bunce at a private trial.

A divorce complaint had been filed here today by Marion Elinor Eliot James against Carlton James, both of whom are New York City socialites, charging desertion.

Hatton, Film Actor Claims Bankruptcy

CLASH MARKS MITCHELL TAX TRIAL

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, May 25.—A dull, statistical session of the income tax evasion trial of Charles E. Mitchell, former head of the National City Bank was temporarily enlivened today in an vitriolic exchange of accusations between United States Attorney George Z. Medalie and Defense Counsel Max D. Steuer.

The brush occurred during the examination of Daniel T. Bergin, office manager for the brokerage firm of Hornblower and Weeks, regarding the alleged sale and repurchase of 8,500 shares of Anaconda stock by Mitchell from W. D. Thornton, president of the Greene-Cananea Copper Company, which the government charges was a "sham" transaction.

Steuer shouted:

"There isn't anything the United States Attorney wouldn't do to accomplish his desired result."

Medalie was trying to show that the stock was repurchased from Thorton on May 4, 1931, by Mitchell. Steuer contended that the witness could not testify that "Thornton actually sold the stock to Mitchell." However, Medalie succeeded in bringing out through the witness that Thornton sold 8,500 shares on that date for 26⅝ and that Mitchell purchased the same amount at the same price.

Baby's Head Tangles In Steering Wheel

SAN FRANCISCO, May 25.—(AP.)—Left alone in his uncle's parked automobile, 3-year-old Bobby Sharp had a wriggling good time until he got his head caught between the spokes of the stearing wheel. A garage mechanic finally cut the spoke from the wheel to free him.

3 Killed by Blast In Fireworks Plant

MEXICO CITY, May 25.—(AP.)—Three persons were killed and four seriously injured last night in the explosion of a powder magazine at a fireworks factory at Santa Rosa, 20 miles west of here. The cause of the blast was not determined.

HOW THE CANDID CAMERA WATCHED MR. MORGAN

MORGAN AIDE'S DEFENSE ENRAGES PECORA

$6,000,000,000 SALES

The statement revealed that slightly more than $6,000,000,000 worth of securities of all kinds—back by the golden name of Morgan—have been sold to the public since January 1, 1919, of which slightly more than $2,000,000,000 worth have been retired.

And in great detail Whitney's defense of the operations, the methods, the ideals, and even the honor of the house of Morgan, set forth directly or by plain inference the point of view that in selling securities J. P. Morgan & Co. was building on the future of the conutry and acting always in integrity and good faith.

That was the broad defense offered by handsome, gray-templed "Icicle" Whitney in meeting the savage onslaught of Pecora the prober—Pecora, whose fiery Sicilian blood was at boiling heat—whose black Italian eyes glittered as the subtle Whitney drew his portrait of the angelican benevolent qualities of the house of Morgan.

SAVAGE ATTACK

Pecora, savage as a timber wolf denied his meat, leaped constantly at the slim, elusive Whitney, only to miss his prey and fall back with a snarl.

Fiercely, Pecora pressed Whitney to explain why great batches of Alleghany common stock was handed over to "close friends" of the house of Morgan at 20 when the stock was selling on the market far above 32; why the house of Morgan saw fit to offer virtually a cash present to these "close friends" who happened to occupy powerful place or enjoy special influence—men like William G. McAdoo, now Senator from California; William A. Woodin, now Secretary of the Treasury; Owen J. Roberts, now an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court; John J. Raskob, then chairman of the Democratic National Committee and many more.

But coolly and invariably "Icicle" Whitney made reply that friendship—friendship of the purest ray serene—dictated the Morgan generosity.

WHITNEY COUNTERS

Pecora, slashing ahead, pressed Whitney about John J. Raskob, asking if he knew what post Raskob then occupied, but Whitney blandly countered with the question:

"Wasn't it something to do with the Democratic party?"

"You ought to know! He was your close friend, wasn't he?"

The whole atmosphere of the hearing, this afternoon, is bitter and venomous. Underneath the thinnest overlay of courtesy is apparent the determination of Pecora to paint Morgan as the "head devil of Wall Street," and the house of Morgan as the abode of wickedness.

Under the surface and now breaking through, with Pecora's biting queries as to why Morgan handed over such lovely stock bargains to Raskob, McAdoo, Charles D. Hilles; Joseph R. Nutt and others who were powers in the councils of their political parties, is obvious the intent of Pecora to establish—if only by inference—that the house of Morgan was out to rule and dominate the United States of America—politically, industrially and financially.

IRON-HANDED CZAR?

Underneath it all, and exploding in lightning flashes and claps of thunder, is Pecora's determination to paint J. P. Morgan as the overlord of the American people—a financial dictator of the destinies of 120,000,000 people—and not an altruistic and unselfish overlord but an iron-handed czar.

As the afternoon proceeds Pecora, glaring at young Whitney, while J. P. Morgan, with a hand on the back of Whitney's chair, looks on anxiously, rips through the list of "close friends" who got Alleghany benefits.

Name by name he attaches to them some post of political power or industrial, or financial eminence which might have been useful to Morgan—and mostly with emphasis on the political angle. So much so that Senator Goldsborough, of Maryland, protests against "all this political vaudeville"—putting it bluntly, Pecora is asking and intimating:

"Were you people trying to buy up the nation? Trying to buy up everyone presumably useful, then or thereafter, to the purposes of J. P. Morgan Co.?"

He doesn't put it in so many words, of course, but the import is as high as a mountain and as deep as a valley.

DRAMATIC STRUGGLE

The whole savage duel this afternoon between Whitney and Pecora is a conflict of two diametrically opposite and conflicting estimates of the character and methods of the house of Morgan.

On the one hand is George Whitney calmly asserting the integrity, fair purposes and patriotic vision of his house. On the other is Pecora, asserting or intimating, that Morgan and all his works constitute a peril and a danger to the people and the republic.

It is striking and dramatic, this hammer-and-tongs struggle between two brainy men—one calm and cold—the other hot blooded and fiery-tempered—both looking at the same picture and one seeing it all pure and white and the other all sinister and black.

TEXT OF MORGAN LETTER TO WOODIN

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The text of J. P. Morgan & Co.'s letters to William H. Woodin, now secretary of the Treasury, as revealed in the Morgan Senate inquiry, follows:

"My dear Mr. Woodin:

"You may have seen in the papers that we recently made a public offering of $35,000,000 Alleghany Corporation 15-year collateral trust convertible 5 per cent bonds which went off very well.

"In this connection the Guaranty Company offered today $25,000,000 of Alleghany Corporation cumulative 5½ per cent preferred stock. There was also a strong demand for this stock.

"The Guaranty Company also sold, privately, some of the common stock at $24 a share.

"We have kept for our own investment some of the common stock at a cost of $20 a share, and, although we are making no offering of this stock, as it is not the class of security we wish to offer publicly, we are asking some of our close friends if they would like some of this stock at the same price it is costing us, namely, $20 a share.

"I believe that the stock is selling in the market around $35 to $37 a share, which means very little except that people wish to speculate.

"We are reserving for you 1,000 shares at $20 a share if you would like to have it.

"There are no strings attached to this stock, so you can sell it whenever you wish.

"For further information regarding this corporation I am enclosing circular covering the bond issue.

"We just want you to know that we are thinking of you in this connection and thought you might like to have a little of the stock at the same price we are paying for it.

"I am sending this to your office as I understand that you are now on your way through the Panama Canal but this can wait until you return.

"Hoping you are having a pleasant trip and with best regards, "Sincerely yours,"

The photostatic copy of the letter bore no signature but initials on the copy were identified as those of Ewing.

Judge Bans Easy 'Walkout' on Marriage

It's not so easy to walk out of marriage, Judge Frank P. Patterson advised young people today in labeling the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Helen Fay Armstrong, 22, of 103 Ross street, Tarentum, against Weir P. Armstrong, 25, of Beverly Hills, Cal., as another example of "marry in haste and repent at leisure."

The two eloped to Wellsburg, W. Va., in 1928 and kept their marriage secret for four years, she testified, adding that they never lived together.

Judge Patterson said he couldn't understand how the wife could allege willful desertion if they had never lived together.

WOODIN KEEPS SILENT

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(Universal)—Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, who was listed as a preferred client of J. P. Morgan & Co. in the purchase of stock below the market price, declined to comment on the revelations before the Senate banking inquiry.

ENGLISH RAPS NEW LEAGUE OF CITIZENS

The new Citizens' League of Allegheny County was attacked by Councilman W. Y. English, apparently as a campaign spokesman for regular forces, at a get-together meeting of the Greater Pittsburgh Garage Association, attended last night by Mayor John S. Herron and members of the City Council majority—Frank L. Duggan, George S. Oliver and Clifford B. Connelley.

English pleaded for consideration by voters of the "facts" the Herron majority will present during the campaign as against the "propaganda" he said opponents will present without complete details. He pointed out in support of the present regime that Pittsburgh's credit rating was outstanding.

JUDGE SMITH SPEAKS

Judge Ralph H. Smith, lone representative of the independent forces on the speakers list, avoided a direct political reference. He pointed indirectly to accomplishments of the two-year-old garage group that have been possible because as an "independent co-operative rendering a real community service" it has raised the ethics of and provided a business code for garages.

More than 500 independent garage representatives gathered at Webster Hall heard short talks also by Judges Benjamin Lencher and Frank A. Piekarski and Representative Max J. Spann.

Councilman English led the applause when the association announced the entrance of John D. Nuskey, East End garage owner, as its candidate in the council race.

HERRON RAPS FOES

Mayor Herron spoke, referring only briefly to politics. He remarked:

"I am not a candidate; I am the Mayor."

After asserting independents are only independents until something else comes along for them to join, Herron said:

"A great many people doubt very much whether any of us are honest. We're not so sure of it ourselves after we read the papers."

LEAGUE AIDES NAMED

A list of 150 members of a general committee of the Citizens League was announced last night. The league was formed to organize independent voters into forces to be active in the fall elections.

The committee, while predominantly Republican, is given a non-partisan tinge through the appearance in the membership of a number of Democrats.

Heading the committee is Leslie M. Johnston, chairman of the Citizens Committee, which played an active part in the prosecution of former Mayor Charles H. Kline and Bertram L. Succop, deposed director of supplies. His assistants will be Miss Hannah Patterson and A. Leo Weil, Jr., Harry Bastow, president of the Allied Boards of Trade, is secretary, and F. C. Irish, treasurer.

Johnston, following the meeting, said he would fight for elimination of the "spoils" system and "selfish, grasping politicians," who look upon government as a "private racket."

CUBAN FACTIONS WEIGH TRUCE

HAVANA, May 25.—(AP.)—Proposals for a "truce on terrorism" was reported under consideration today by representatives of groups opposed to the regime of President Machado.

The truce was said to have been proposed last night at a conference of delegates who were represented as believing that Sumner Welles, United States ambassador, may take a hand in placating Cuban political disputes. Members of the Nationalist Union and followers of Miguel Mariano Gomez were understood to have attended.

A short time after the ambassador called on Orestes Ferrara, secretary of state, yesterday orders were given to newspaper censors that no mention of the interview be made. Later the order was revoked.

Mine Blast Frees 350,000 Tons of Ore

LEADVILLE, Colo., May 25.—(AP.)—Mining engineers estimate it will take several years to remove all the ore broken in a dynamite blast which power experts described as the largest underground shot in mining history.

Sixty thousand tons of the explosive yesterday broke down about 350,000 tons of molybdenum ore and cracked, say the engineers, possibly 500,000 additional tons which will easily cave down later.

DAVIS DECLARED DRAGGING U. S. INTO LEAGUE

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The results of President Roosevelt's proposed consultative pact would be to embroil the United States in European intrigues and quarrels and probably war, Senator Elmer Thomas (Dem.), of Oklahoma, warned today. He added:

"It would also be the same as taking the United States into the League of Nations.

"The whole scheme of the League has been to form a group of nations to impose its will by force and sanctions on another group. The implications of a consultative pact are in entire harmony with this scheme.

"If we participate in determining an aggressor, we shall naturally take sides with one group and make ourselves the enemy of the other group. That makes for war.

"Moreover, we would be forced to abandon our policy of neutrality and freedom of the seas."

Expressing surprise that such an offer should be made by Norman H. Davis on behalf of America, Senator Thomas declared "some people seem to think they speak with the force of the entire American nation." He added:

"No one can commit the American people. The Senate must yet pass on a consultative pact."

VANDENBERG WARNING

A Republican leader, Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, warned against entering "a war partnership," adding:

"The consultative pact offer is only 48 hours old and already it has one interpretation in Europe and another in America. Under one interpretation it's a peace partnership, under the other it's a war partnership. We are urged to believe America's interests will not be jeopardized. That's the vice and the menace of such an arrangement."

Davis' Policy at Geneva Assailed In Editorials as Un-American

The speech of Norman H. Davis before the disarmament conference committee at Geneva on Monday continues to draw editorial comment in American newspapers, The New York Sun said yesterday:

Old fashioned experts on international law have devoted a great deal of time and writing to the discussion of what aggression is, but Norman H. Davis disposes of the question shortly enough:

"In the long run we may come to the conclusion that the simplest and most accurate definition of an aggressor is one whose armed forces are found on alien soil in violation of treaties."

Let us put this to the test of practice. Assume that the government of a foreign country seizes all the American citizens within its borders, throws them in jail, kills them or puts them to torture, confiscates their property and refuses to heed the protests of the American government.

Under the circumstances, according to old fashioned folk, a declaration of war against the offending government would be justifiable; and that declaration would naturally be followed by an American invasion by land or an attack by sea.

What then, under the Norman Davis concept of aggression? Why, the United States would be the aggressor, for there was no invasion of this country by the other government's armed forces. It is unfortunate that Mr. Davis seems to think in terms of France and Germany and not in terms of his own country.

But he has been abroad a great deal of his life and cannot be expected to look at things as narrowly as those Americans who, not being international-minded, subject all new proposals concerning war and peace to a scrutiny essentially domestic in its nature.

The Columbus, (O.), Dispatch on May 23 said:

If the United States adopts the course mapped out for it by Norman H. Davis at Geneva, it will face a peril of foreign entanglement as great as if it joined the League of Nations.

It requires only the mentality of a child to see that the United States would be committed to an attitude bordering on the verge of war against other powers. And the short step from such an attitude to the reality of war may be judged from America's experience in the last war, when it shifted from a position of neutrality to belligerency in such a short time. In such a future situation the United States would be half way at war from the start.

The Indiana, (Pa.), Evening Gazette on May 22, said:

The whole plan outlined by the President is somewhat utopian, but it is impossible to build anything without the proper building material, and we are without utopian nations.

The Lewiston, (Pa.), Sentinel on May 23, said:

Prime Minister MacDonald, of England, said the appeal of President Roosevelt to the heads of 54 nations, asking them to support definite peace measures, reduction of armament, non-aggression agreements, etc., ended the period of American "isolation." This point of view will displease many who have felt that the United States should keep out of foreign entanglements.

U. S. AND JAPAN CLASH ON SEA PARITY

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service.

GENEVA, May 25.—Japan and the United States clashed openly today for the first time since the disarmament conference began.

The conflict was precipitated by an unexpected new Japanese demand for virtual naval parity with Great Britain and the United States.

As an opening wedge for attaining naval equality with the other two big sea powers, Naotake Sato, of Japan, urged deletion of the article in the present British disarmament plan, which binds the signers of the Washington and London naval treaties to the limitations of these pacts.

He admitted deletion of this particular section of the British arms plan might not necessarily affect actual disarmament, but maintained it would have a deleterious effect upon public opinion.

The United States, he told the conference, is convinced that the Washington and London treaties comprised real limitation of naval arms and therefore constituted a great donation to international peace.

He closed by expressing a hope it would not be found necessary to strike out the article.

Under existing treaties, the British, American and Japanese navies are on a 5-5-3 ratio.

Peru and Colombia Sign Peace Treaty

GENEVA, May 25.—(AP.)—An agreement ending the armed conflict between Peru and Colombia over the Leticia border territory was ceremoniously signed today at a public session of the League of Nations Council.

JAPAN'S MOVE STIRS CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(INS.)—Japan's insistence upon virtual naval parity with the United States and Great Britain at the present time would tend to nullify all the promises President Roosevelt has made to the world in the way of co-operating to maintain peace, American officials declared today.

Describing as "preposterous at the present time" Japan's proposal at Geneva for revision of existing naval treaties to permit Japan to increase its naval ratio, officials pointed out President Roosevelt's offer of greater co-operation to keep the peace was dependent on drastic disarmament by the rest of the world.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson voiced objection to a change in the existing 5-5-3 naval ratio between the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

BRITAIN BALKS AT U. S. PLAN

GENEVA, May 25.—(AP.)—Great Britain opposed any hard and fast definition of an aggressor nation at today's session of the disarmament conference, contending that such a definition would be only a trap for the innocent and protection for the guilty.

This position was explained by Capt. Anthony Eden, the British representative, who insisted that it was necessary to know the background of each case of aggression in order to determine the responsible party.

(The doctrine that any nation which sent troops to the territory of another country was all aggressor was set forth in President Roosevelt's recent international peace message. Subsequently it was amplified by Norman H. Davis, the American representative at Geneva.)

Ohio Legislator Would Buy Canada

COLUMBUS, O., May 25.—(AP.)—Representative Gus Kasch, of Akron, introduced resolutions in the Ohio legislature calling upon the Assembly to memoralize Congress to transfer West Virginia's "Panhandle" to Ohio, trade Alaska to Great Britain for the islands south of the center of the St. Lawrence, and cancel the British war debt exchange for Canda.

Beallsville Orders Hoop Rolling Ban

BEALLSVILLE, Pa., May 25.—(AP.)—The town council forbids any person to roll a hoop, or ride a bicycle, scooter, kiddie car, tricycle or to roller skate or slide down hill on streets or sidewalks. Traffic dangers are given as the reason.

Hobart Bosworth Survives Illness

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 25.—(AP.)—Hobart Bosworth, veteran stage and motion picture actor, who recently was reported critically ill in Sioux City, Ia., returned here last night fully recovered from the illness.

U.S. WON'T DROP OLD POLICIES LONDON TOLD

(Universal Service Special Cable.)

LONDON, May 25.—The United States Congress will act to prevent the abandonment of America's traditional policy of neutrality in European disputes, and will not permit the United States to give up its "freedom of the seas" claim, despite attempts by the Roosevelt administration to involve America in European entanglements.

This is the view of Lord Beaverbrook, influential British publisher and advocate of empire "free trade." In a signed editorial in the London Daily Express today, Lord Beaverbrook writes:

"Why do newspapers misunderstand Ambassador Norman Davis' speech at Geneva?

"Why is it that the press of Britain, with one or two exceptions, including the Daily Express, believe or pretend that the United States is willing to take part in European conflicts?

"If the newspapers believe it, they have no knowledge of conditions in the United States.

President Lacks Power

"The President has no powers to involve Americans in European entanglements. The American people will not have these entanglements. Any treaties involving American participation in European wars would not be ratified by Congress.

"The Monroe Doctrine still prevails—and in the hearts of the American people.

"If any British newspaper believes otherwise, it errs either through ignorance or because it wishes to believe an absurd untruth.

"In either event, it is misleading the public here as to the real meaning of the American proposals and the inability of any American government to carry through treaties involving projects of intervention in Europe.

"Do not be misled by false counsellors who pretend that in our policy we are acting in collaboration with the United States.

Sees Chapter Ended

Davis' proposals "have ended the chapter of America's political isolation," Sir Walter Layton, economist, states in the London News-Chronicle.

Regarding Davis' promise that America will consult with the League of Nations in the event of a threat of war and will refrain from interfering with any collective action taken against an aggressor, he adds:

"This means that we in this country can finally dismiss any hesitation we may have had in carrying out economic and other sanctions under the covenant for fear such action might bring us into collision with the United States."

JOHN BASSETT MOORE HITS PEACE HYSTERIA

Famed International Law Expert Foe Of Meddling

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 25.—While the diplomatic representatives of world powers exchanged views on disarmament at Geneva today, John Bassett Moore, outstanding authority on international law, counseled clear-thinking and the avoidance of what he chose to call peace hysteria.

Moore, former judge of the Court of International Justice and counselor to the State Department for many years, would make no direct comment on the proposals put forward in the past few days by Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador to Europe.

But the man who has read more peace treaties than any other living American was entirely willing to let his own observations on disarmament, internationalism and national ego, made from time to time, stand for him today.

Meddling Assailed

In a recent letter to Representative Hamilton Fish, Judge Moore said:

"A nation that undertakes to meddle with every foreign disturbance is bound to become an international nuisance, to its own detriment as well as to the annoyance of other countries. Power is neither gained nor kept by such methods."

Enlarging on his own observation that there seemed to be a disposition in some quarters to consider that there was no longer a law of neutrality, Judge Moore, in his letter to Fish, said:

"I do not hesitate to declare the supposition that neutrality is a thing of the past to be unsound in theory and false in fact. No government, so far as I am advised, has repealed its neutrality laws. Those of the United States still remain on the statute books; and, if they are to be repealed, it should be done directly and not by implication or by embarking on a lawless course in the name of peace."

U. S. Policy Opposed

Addressing himself to the proposed embargo bill before Congress, Judge Moore said:

"The pending resolution is, I do not hesitate to affirm, opposed to the settled policy and the highest interests of the United States and also to the provisions of our federal Constitution. If adopted, it would enable the President to carry us into war without the prerequisite constitutional declaration of war by Congress."

That international peace depends upon something more than pacts, agreements, conferences or any other understandings, by whatever name they may be called, has been repeatedly affirmed and re-affirmed by Judge Moore. He has said:

"But no matter by what means war may be ended, there is one thing certain, and that is that no peace that depends mainly on force for its continuance can ever endure.

"For the preservation of peace all devices, such as international conferences, arbitration, mediation and good offices, are or may be useful. But back of all this we must rely upon the cultivation of a mental attitude which will lead men to think first of amicable processes rather than war when differences arise."

Amplifying his frequent references to so-called "peace hysteria," Judge Moore, addressing the students of Johns Hopkins University, said:

"The impression which more or less prevails in every nation that it desires peace more than other nations do can be regarded only as another example of that tendency to self-delusion which is worldwide in its operation and is one of the commonest manifestations of everyday life."

Later in the same talk Judge Moore said:

"Questions of war and peace depend, and will continue to depend, not so much upon the size of military establishments as upon the cultivation of the spirit and habit of justice, of self-control, of reciprocal recognition of rights and of forbearance."

Judge Moore has declared and continues to declare:

"There can be no end of international wars until there are no more civil wars."

Making no attempt to conceal his lack of agreement with the recent international proposals put forward by this country's Ambassador to Europe,

That he will speak soon, Judge Moore indicated. Sensing danger, the noted international authority, long noted for his ability to "keep his feet on the ground" as well as his imperviousness to fantastic theories, plans an early appeal to the reason of the people.

WILSON SPIRIT REVIVAL HAILED

MADRID, May 25.—(Universal.)—El Sol, a leading republican paper, commented editorially on Norman Davis' speech, saying:

"Davis speech is a revolutionary departure in American foreign policies and marks the rebirth of the internationalistic spirit of Jefferson, Monroe, Hayes and Wilson.

"The speech is the strongest guarantee that the disarmament conference will not end in failure and the best guarantee for world-wide peace which would always be unsafe unless the United States comes to agreement with the European powers."

Germans See Binding Pact Signified

Universal Service.

BERLIN, May 24.—Berlin newspapers look upon the speech of United States Ambassador Norman H. Davis at Geneva, outlining the so-called "Roosevelt doctrine" under which the United States would be willing to consult European nations in case of a threat of war, as word that the United States is to become entangled in European affairs.

The influential Catholic newspaper Germania states:

"Norman Davis' speech is a historical event. Since Woodrow Wilson, America has been a land of splendid isolation. If the will of the American President becomes law, the United States now should be obliged to participate in discussions concerning international controversies and to join in concerted steps, providing unity of opinion can be established as to who was the aggressor.

"It is a far-reaching step which America has made, when one considers how sensitive American public opinion is toward entering binding agreements with Europe as well as how it opposes the League of Nations and how it has maintained a reserved attitude toward The Hague court.

"It is a big event if one considers that discussions around the green table already signify a binding agreement and obligation, the moral bearing of which must not be underestimated.

"It is doubtlessly correct to assume that without the drastic lesson taught by the Japanese in China, Washington would hardly have been prepared to make such concessions."

The newspaper Deutsche Ellgemeine Zeitung states:

"Heretofore America has always remained quiescently observant. American non-membership in the League of Nations as well as her traditional shyness toward entanglement in European affairs determined this attitude.

"The Roosevelt proclamation inaugurated a new direction in American foreign policy, which now has practically been fixed at Geneva by Norman H. Davis."

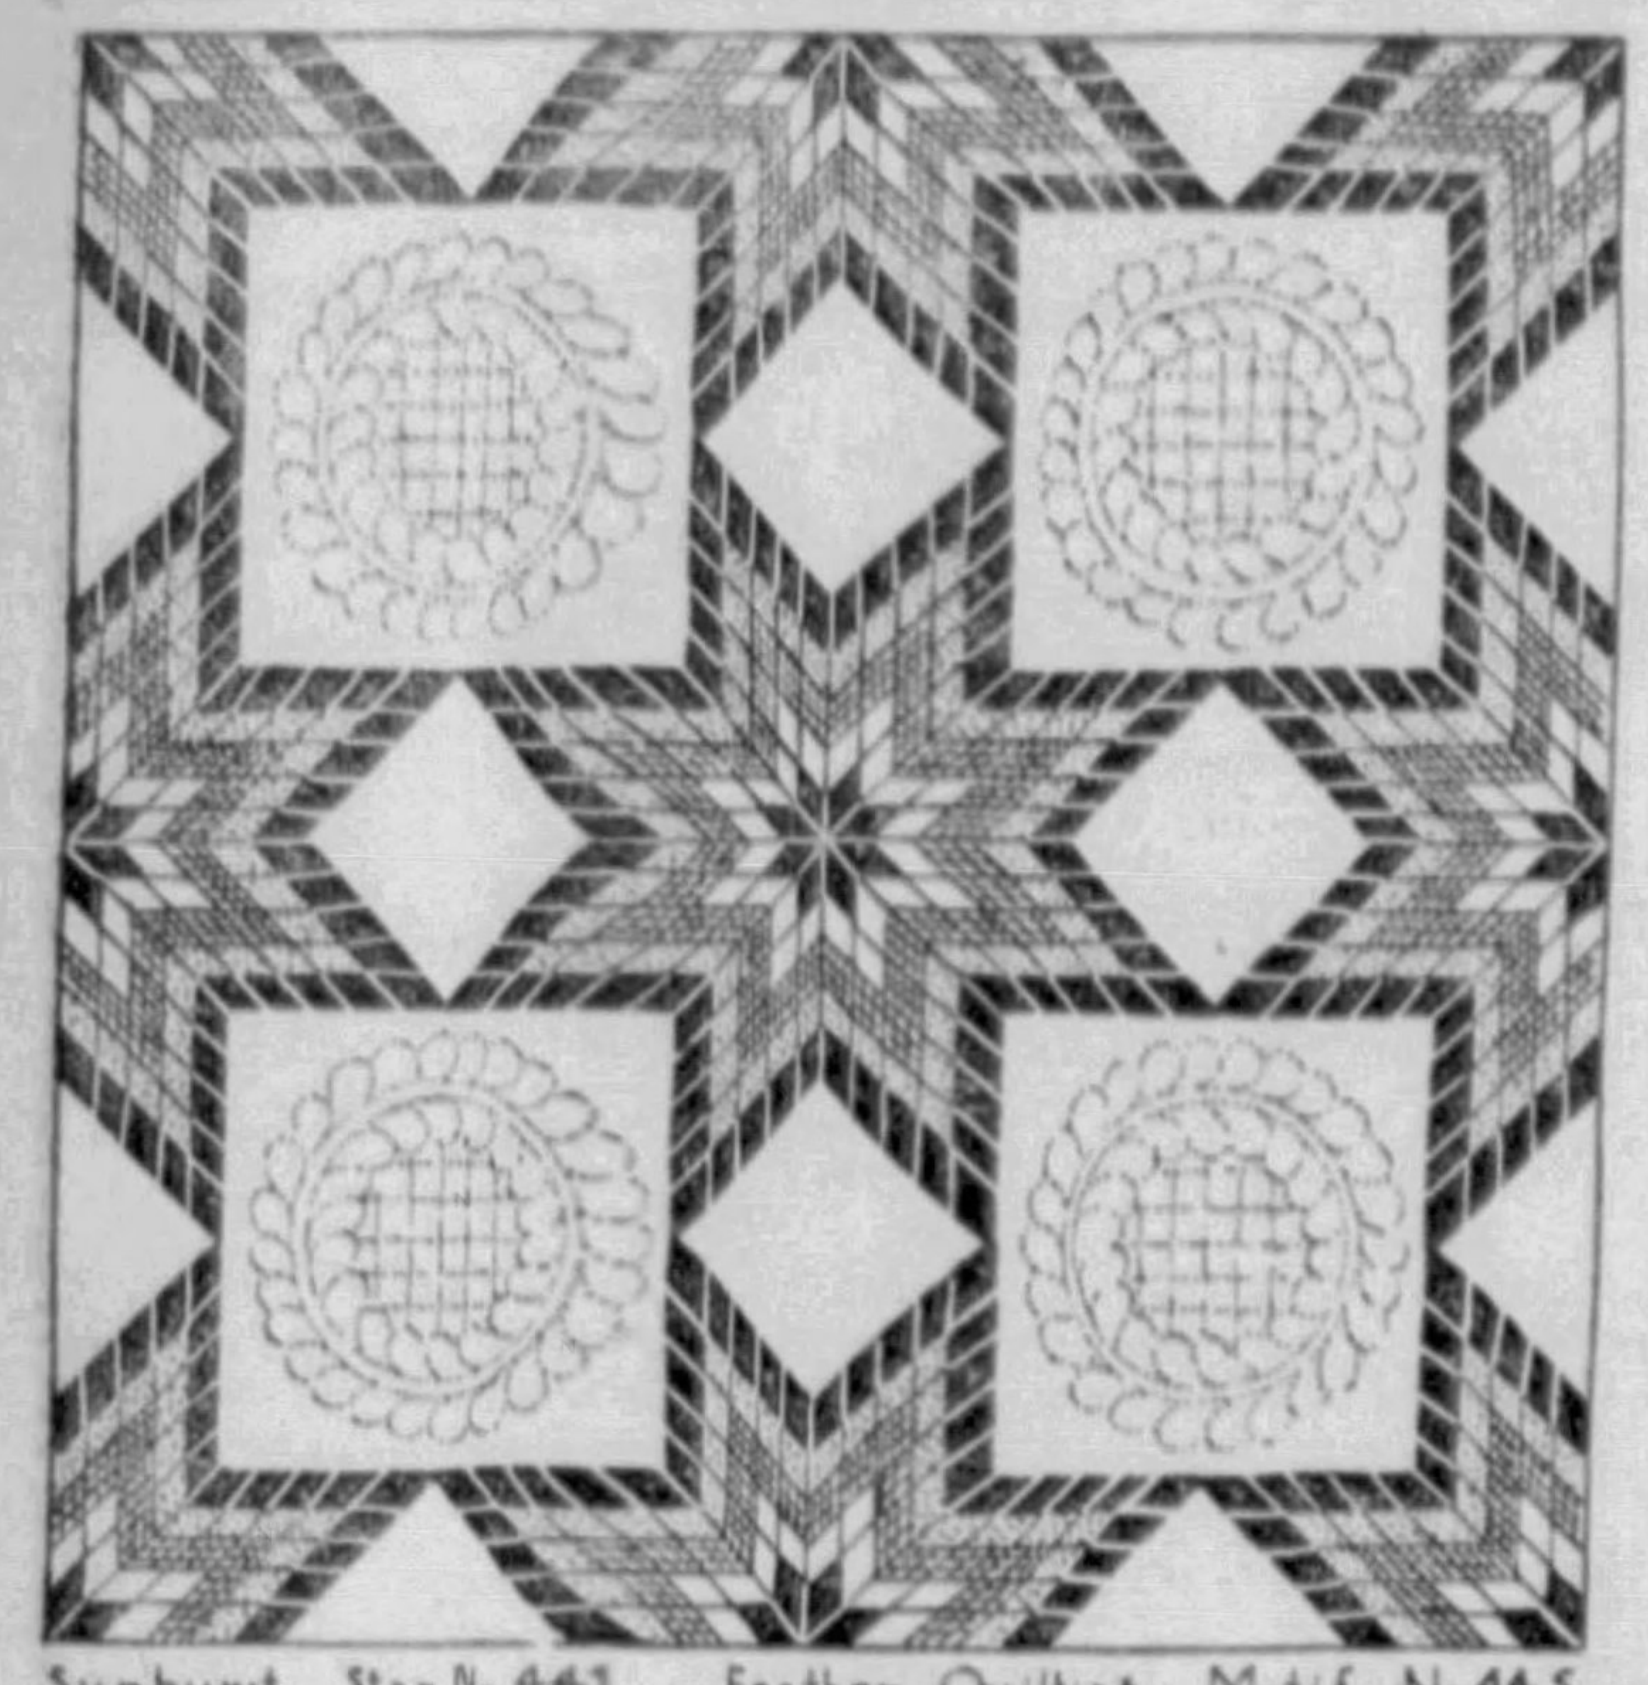
PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN



Sunburst Star No. 441 Feather Quilting Motif No. 445

By Laura Wheeler

Mysterious—beautiful—the stars have held a fascination for man since earliest times. The quiltmaker of olden times, too, found them a practical and decorative motif to use in her quilt patterns. Probably the loveliest of all her star patterns is the Sunburst Star, known under other names, too, but always developed from a diamond patch that starts out as a small eight-pointed star and grows, sometimes in shaded colors, sometimes in contrasting patches, to a beautiful large star.

The pattern comes to you with complete simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials. Price of pattern, 10c.

It is a large motif, 12 inches in diameter; only six of these motifs are needed for a quilt in either single or double bed size. These six motifs are offered you in a transfer pattern, and can be ordered separately or together with the Sunburnst Star Quilt Pattern at an additional cost of 10c (20c for both). The Feather design is of a size that lends itself well to small quilted cushions, lingerie cases, or other small accessories.

Send your order to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

SENATE CLEARS FEDERAL JUDGE

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(AP.) —Federal Judge Harold Louderback is free to return to the bench in California, acquitted by the Senate on the five impeachment counts brought against him.

He said to resign now would be "silly" and like playing into his enemies' hands, even though a majority of the Senate registered disapproval of his conduct in receiving cases by voting against him on the final general charge. The verdict was rendered late yesterday after nine days of trial.

MRS. JACKSON WILLS MILLION

Disposing of more than $1,000,000, the will of Mary Louisa Jackson was filed for probate today. Miss Jackson was a sister of the late John B. Jackson, former president of the Fidelity Trust Company. The bulk of her estate is left in trust with the Fidelity Trust Company for relatives.

Of the residue, $175,000 is left to churches, hospitals, and charitable institutions as follows: $75,000 in trust for St. Andrew's Episcopal Church; $10,000 for the memorial chapel of that church; $10,000 to the Home for Aged Protestant Women of Wilkinsburg; $20,000 to the Homeopathic Hospital; $20,000 to the Episcopal Church Home of Pittsburgh; and $40,000 to the Permanent Episcopal Fund of the diocese of Pittsburgh.

FREIGHT RATE CUT HERE AID TO INDUSTRY

Pittsburgh's steel industry was given a "lift" today from a new source when the traffic division of the Chamber of Commerce announced the Interstate Commerce Commission has lowered the freight rate on wrought iron pipe from eastern points to Western Trunk Line territory and raised it from Chicago and Milwaukee.

Although the new schedules do not go into effect until next August 2, steel men here said it would place the local industry in a favorable position in quoting prices on contracts to be delivered in the fall.

Complaints were made with the commission by Babcock & Wilcox Tube Company, Central Tube Company, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, Pittsburgh Steel Company, Spang, Chalfont & Company and many other Pittsburgh district producers. Their attack was on the old rates from Chicago which averages 22.5 to 38.3 per cent of first-class rates as compared with rates from Pittsburgh district which average from 32.7 to 45.6 per cent.

RESULTS IN REDUCTION

The commission's decision requires the establishment of rates on the basis of 32.5 per cent of first-class, resulting in a reduction from Pittsburgh where they are higher and an increase in the rates from Chicago where they are now less than this percentage.

Reacting to the wide-flung advance in industrial activity, the Pittsburgh district's residential building has kept step with the 20 per cent increase in this type of construction throughout the nation, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. Of even greater importance as a barometer of business pickup, according to experts, is the fact that a halt has been called to the sharp downward movement of all lines of construction since 1930.

Buttressing this report is the announcement from the Federal State Employment Office here that 11 engineers have been called back to work on construction jobs through its employment service.

BUILDING IMPROVES

If this present increased activity continues, it is reasonable to expect further important improvement in residential building contracts in the Pittsburgh territory "just ahead," according to J. Hammon, Jr., manager of the Pittsburgh office of F. W. Dodge. These contracts during April amounted to $1,890,900 as compared with $1,453,700 in March.

For the first 15 days of May this type of construction is almost equal to the same period last year, according to Hammon, with $1,250,900, as against $1,341,600 a year ago. Non-residential building for the same period this year was $1,248,100 against $1,485,000 last year.

Recognizing an upward trend in the business cycle, the National Steel Corporation today announced it has started its first activity with its Great Lakes fleet. Four 10-ton vessels have been commissioned to carry ore from the company's mines at the head of the lakes to its Detroit plant and to the lower lakes for rail shipment to its Weirton, W. Va., plant.

Officials of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad reported carloadings were maintaining their improved position and said that if business continues to increase more men will be put to work at their shops in McKees Rocks. Two hundred men have returned to the yards for locomotive and repair work in the last month, they said.

CRIES FOIL KIDNAPER

JOLIET, Ill., May 25.—(INS.)—Police guarded the home of Clyde G. Calkins today following an attempt to kidnap his 4-year-old daughter, Shirley Mae, whose life has been threatened in mysterious blood-smeared notes.

Calkins was awakened by his wife's screams and found Shirley Mae lying on the floor, he told police. The girl said a man had started to carry her away during the night when her mother's screams startled him and he ran.

Mrs. Calkins received three notes last week threatening her daughter's life unless larceny charges against a former maid Hilda Demming, were dropped. Miss Demming denied any knowledge of the notes.

JANITOR KILLS PUBLISHER

LOS ANGELES, May 25.—(INS.)—His effort to save the life of a fellow executive had ended today in the murder of E. Gail Patterson, 55, business manager and assistant publisher of the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News.

Enraged when discharged as janitor, Edwin Davis, 58, attacked and wounded J. W. McGuire, 60, purchasing agent of the newspaper.

Patterson heard the noise in the hall, saw Davis shoot McGuire twice, and leaped to McGuire's rescue. Davis whirled, shot and killed Patterson, and fled to a street car. Davis was trailed and arrested. McGuire, shot through the leg and abdomen, was expected to recover.

It is the second railroad company to take out this type of license, the first being the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western.

COX BREADLINE STILL LARGE

While warm weather in some respects has lessened the sufferings of the destitute, it does not curtail the activities of Father Cox. He still has an army of unemployed to care for. The breadline does not seem to decrease in length and hundreds of families must still be supplied with food. Father Cox is maintaining these activities as best he can with limited resources.

He needs day in and day out help in the way of money, food and clothing. In fact, the donations are coming in so slowly that he has been forced to plead even for bread. This is something unusual, and he will be glad to send for these donations from housewives if they will telephone Old St. Patrick's, Grant 4390.

These are some of the reasons why the Sun-Telegraph continues the subscription drive for his unemployment fund. He urgently needs the money he gets from this drive. Every subscription that comes in on the blank on this page or is telephoned in with the request that Fother Cox be given credit for it brings to his unemployment relief fund a liberal cash commission.

CHAPTER XIX.

It was lucky for Harry Thaw that Bedford, his valet did die! For if William Travers Jerome had ever got Bedford on the witness stand, it would have been just too bad for Harry Thaw! Bedford knew plenty, as I realized later, and was too slow-minded to have fenced off cross-examination—the memorable kind that was to come in this case.

After I had met Judge Olcott, he told me I would have to go before the grand jury.

Jerome, the District Attorney it seems, was out of town. In fact, nearly everyone appearing in the case later had to leave some summer resort and return to New York.

"All I can tell you," Olcott told me, "is that there is no law compelling you to testify against your husband. Do you understand?"

"I think I do," I replied.

Being a lawyer's daughter, some vague instinct or intuition or something came to my aid.

Protecting Thaw

Heavily veiled, I entered the grand jury room. Solemnly I was ushered to a chair where I sat down and lifted my veil. A young assistant district attorney, Francis P. Garvin, paced up and down before the rows of solemn-faced grand jurymen and began asking me questions—questions regarding my name, age, who I was, etc. But when he came to direct questions regarding the actual tragedy, I refused to answer.

"On what grounds?" he demanded.

"Because I would not want to say anything that might injure my husband," I replied.

They let me go.

When I told Judge Olcott, he smiled, so I knew he was pleased with what I had done.

Meanwhile, arrangements were made to bring Mother Thaw right back and not to break the news to her until she landed in Europe.

At the Tombs

My first visit to the Tombs was an awful experience. I had never been in a jail or a prison. The entrance to the Tombs had to be policed. Dozens of officers were needed to hold back the crowds, milling and pressing on both sides to get a look at me. Mounted policemen, also, had to clear the way so that the electric brougham carrying me could drive up to the entrance.

My knees gave under me. My throat contracted as I ran up the steps of the Tombs.

There were cries of "There she is!" "It's Evelyn!" "That's her!" "Ooh! She's got a veil."

They were terribly disappointed because they couldn't see my face.

By the time I was inside the Tombs I was so weak I could hardly stand up. The matron searched me. Then one of the lawyers led me upstairs to a special tier known as "Murderers' Row."

Harry was in the first cell.

What did I say to him? I don't remember.

What was there to say?

He began talking about lawyesr; about Bedford, who had been taken to the Presbyterian Hospital and for whom there was no hope. He asked me to go and see Bedford and to make sure that his last wishes were carried out. One of the lawyers was to help me with this.

He asked me to do all I could to set his mother straight regarding the lawyers when she arrived. He seemed concerned and upset about one of the lawyers in particular—Delafield, who had represented him for years.

Delafield, it seemed always had strong opinions about Thaw's eccentricities and Delafield had been talking to Judge Olcott.

Setting his jaw, Harry said:

"We must fight any attempt to send me to an insane asylum. It looks like that's what some of them are trying to do. Don't let them talk my mother into it."

Thaw in a Cell

He sat in his shirtsleeves with a handkerchief around his neck and a straw hat on his head.

"There's a terrible draft in this cell," he said, "and some people would love to have me die of pneumonia."

He had stuffed newspapers in and out of the bars at the top of the cell, weaving them in and out to keep out "that draft," in spite of the heat.

Without his valet's ministrations, Thaw was always careless about his personal appearance.

He complained bitterly about the food, although all his meals were sent in on trays from a nearby restaurant.

Before long, Russell Peabody, one of his lawyers, had arranged to have his food sent twice a day from Delmonico's in a metal food container, kept hot by a little brazier of charcoals at the bottom—food containers exactly like the ones I had seen hundreds of times at Stanford White's dinner and supper parties.

The New York newspapers were in an uproar. The wildest stories appeared. I never could begin to tell how weird and farfetched some of them were; stories about everyone concerned.

I asked some questions. My discoveries horrified me. I remembered Schloss Katzenstein and my hideous experience there.

Then the pressure of other matters swept all this from my mind for a while. There was dissension among the lawyers. Thaw was quarreling with Judge Olcott. It seems the latter advised Thaw to avoid trial, pleading insanity. That meant a lunatic asylum.

Thaw raged in his cell. He blamed Judge Olcott's attitude on Delafield. Hartridge and Gleason stood by Thaw. Hartridge said to me:

"It is very evident Judge Olcott is being influenced by some person or persons who do not want this case tried in open court. All Harry asks is a fair trial before a jury. Every man is entitled to that.

"If they succeed in influencing his mother when she returns, you must stand pat so Harry will not be buried alive for the rest of his life in some lunatic asylum. Now, I want you to tell me all you know, everything you can about the events leading up to this tragedy."

I told Hartridge the truth; told him the whole story. Then Hartridge said:

"Now I understand what's back of all this excitement; why some of these prominent men don't want this case aired in court."

An Exodus

That was quite true. The former bosom friends of Stanford White, those of the "inner circle"—naturally, I don't mean all his friends, but I mean those who had access to the Tower, the Twenty-fourth street place and the East Nineteenth street place—were leaving town as rapidly as possible. Some went to Europe.

Another strange commentary on the fellowship of the times—only one man had followed the body of Stanford White to its grave. That was Charles McKim, his business partner. An hour before he died he had thousands of "loyal" friends.

Now, these men—at least most of them—were members of the sedate, conservative Union Club, and so was William Travers Jerome. It was only natural, to be expected, that they would bring all the pressure possible to bear on Jerome to lock Thaw up in an asylum and avoid the scandal which they well knew would engulf many of them if the case ever came to trial.

So many writers, so many prominent men, like Richard Harding Davis, for example, who wrote an editorial published in Collier's Weekly in defense of Stanford White, did not understand the attitude of these men.

They only knew the best side of White, and his secret life—those mysterious love-lairs, when revealed later—were a shocking, unbelievable revelation to them.

At night I walked the floor. I couldn't sleep. I was in a terrible position, with no one to help me and no one to advise me. I had to make up my mind once and for all what I would do. I was still 21 years old, an age at which many girls can decide nothing weightier than which dress to wear at the next party.

I was in a most peculiar position. Personally, I had long ago forgiven Stanford White. I knew his attitude towards women.

Duty to Thaw

On the other hand, I was Harry Thaw's wife and I took my marriage seriously. It was my duty, I decided, to stick by him. All this trouble had been caused on my account, or so the world seemed to think. One newspaper article had quoted the famous lines:

"Was this the face that launched a thousand ships,
And burned the topless towers of Ilium?"

Yes, the world would always say that Harry Thaw had killed Stanford White because of me. On the other hand, I could not understand Thaw's attitude. Stanford White had never bothered me after our marriage; never tried to see me or speak to me. Thaw married me knowing the truth. Why did he have to kill Stanford White at this late date?

It was because of his mental condition. There was no doubt about it. My attitude toward him, the lawyers told me, was of paramount importance.

With tears in his eyes, Hartridge begged me not to bury Thaw alive in an insane asylum. I had to make up my mind one way or the other. And the decision was up to me alone.

On the other hand I knew, deep in my heart, that Harry Thaw hated Stanford White with a bitter, intense hatred before he ever knew me. Also, I knew that contrary to the general belief, Harry Thaw did not kill Stanford White while under the influence of a sudden "brainstorm."

We all had to suffer, to be subjected to endless torment by the terrible publicity. This was murder!

Mrs. Thaw's Visit

Then Mother Thaw arrived. Her first visit to the Tombs was an unforgettable ordeal. We sat waiting our turn to be searched by the matron, Mother Thaw's mouth working spasmodically, uniformed guards standing about staring at us.

In those days, the mere idea of a prison was associated in my mind with disgrace. Nowadays, nobody bothers much. So many prominent persons have served prison sentences, it doesn't seem to matter much. But in those simple days, the sight of a prison was enough to stop one's heart beats.

With Mother Thaw on the scene, there were terrific set-tos among the lawyers.

There were too many of them in the first place. Half of them were for sending Thaw to an insane asylum, and the other half demanded a trial before a jury.

Thaw's persistence finally won. He demanded a trial in open court, won his mother over to his way of thinking, and dismissed Judge Olcott and his firm. This left the case in the hands of Hartridge, Peabody and Gleason.

Then a great Pittsburgh lawyer, D. T. Watson, who had settled the Alaskan boundary question to the mutual satisfaction of the United States and Canada, and who knew the Thaw family in Pittsburgh, came, at Mother Thaw's request, to visit her at the Lorraine. He asked for an interview with me. He wanted to talk to me alone.

He asked me if I intended taking the witness stand in defense of Harry. I told him I did and that Thaw's lawyers were undivided in their opinion on this question—that I must if his life was to be saved.

Mr. Watson asked me if I realized what that meant in a world already hard and cruel enough. A little mystified, I answered:

"Well his lawyers say I am the only one who can save him. I am his wife. I feel it is my duty to do all I can."

Mr. Watson then asked if Harry had made any provision for me so that if anything happened I would be cared for financially. I said no—that I had never thought of any such thing; that I was quite sure no matter what happened, Harry would always provide for me; that it was only natural that he should; that he had more—much more—money than any man really needed. And his family—I was confident, of course—

Riddles

Mr. Watson then proceeded to speak in riddles as far as I was concerned.

"Do you realize what will happen to you when, on the witness stand, you are turned over to the District Attorney?" he asked. "You will be forced to sacrifice your life, your whole future, your happiness, your youth, for this man, Thaw. Do you think he will be grateful? That he or anybody will thank you once it's all over?"

"Well, I never thought about that," I answered.

"I think you are making a great mistake," said Mr. Watson, "from what I know of this man, Thaw."

I couldn't see it at all and ended the interview by stating that there would be no drawing back on my part; that I was convinced it was my duty to save my husband from the electric chair, no matter what happened. So plenty happened!

Globe-Trotting

—By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN—

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Mrs. R. S. Ardary inquires whether we try those household hints before broadcasting them. She tried wrapping the ice in the Sun-Telegraph to retard melting, but it melted twice as fast—the news was so "hot."

* * *

When the mother of eight little rabbits went to rabbit heaven, Lillian Legal, of Swissvale, took it unto herself to care for the brood. She feeds them with a medicine dropper and they are doing well.

* * *

J. F. R.—It is considered bad taste to use bricks, old pieces of concrete, or flat stones in your rock garden; but if you think it looks all right what's the difference?

R. J. S. inquires:

"How about the manufacture of home brew under the new beer act?"

Well, the Snyder act prohibits the manufacture of intoxicating liquor. Anything over 3.2 per cent alcohol is considered intoxicating. The question then resolves itself whether an individual can make 3.2 beer without a manufacturer's license. A manufacturer is one who has a license from the Alcohol Permit Board of the Commonwealth, according to the new laws. Opinions are divided. The trend is that for purely personal consumption a license is not necessary. However, bear in mind that it must not be over 3.2, it must not be sold, it must not be taken from the premises. The best advice is: Don't make it and avoid trouble.

White House 'Voice' Signs For Radio

By AIRCASTER

While it is true that President Roosevelt has shown a tendency to use the facilities of radio at frequent intervals, the kilocycles have lacked any sort of a schedule by which the voice of the White House may be heard on regular occasions.

It has long been the dream of the networks to effect such an arrangement, but not until signatures were affixed yesterday did there seem any likelihood of realization.

It will be WEAF, of which WCAE is the outlet here, on which the voice of the White House will be heard weekly, on Sunday nights, beginning June 4.

The voice will be that of Louis McHenry Howe, whom Edwin C. Hill has described as "the medieval gnome," the confidential advisor and confidante of the President.

King Changes Mind

King George, of England, took orders from a radio man yesterday—and liked it. And then he started giving orders which upset completely the previous schedule of his broadcast to America, when he opens the world economic conference on June 12. Originally, King George was scheduled to talk for American ears at 6 o'clock in the morning of the conference. But, protested Cesar Saerchinger, the foreign representative of CBS:

"A lot of people got up out of bed to hear you last year. It was a novelty. You'd never addressed them before. They won't do it again—that is, many of them won't. How about changing the time to later in the day—then all of my countrymen will hear you?"

The king's English might not have been just like this, but what he said, in effect, was:

"That's a swell idea, and you can call again and I'll give you the new schedule."

Saerchinger called later, and the king assured him that everything had been taken care of and that the conference would be opened later than planned and that the king's speech on June 12 will be heard at 10 a. m., American time.

One or both of the NBC outlets here (WCAE and KDKA) as well as WJAS, the CBS link, will rebroadcast the royal talk at that hour.

What Are You Going To Do About It?

The only reason racketeering exists in this country is that the master racketeers work hand-in-hand with certain crooked political bosses. These self-serving politicians, in turn, work hand-in-hand with certain corrupt police, judges and members of law enforcement agencies.

Racketeers are shielded and favored by unfaithful public officials paid by YOU to serve the public generally, and sworn to apprehend and circumvent the very racketeers they permit to carry on.

YOU, Mr. Citizen, are not considered in the deal. YOUR RIGHTS mean nothing to these certain corrupt politicians, and "law-enforcers."

The racketeer is able to pay, and to pay handsomely, for his protection. YOU pay the corrupt public servant for protecting you against the racketeer, and what do you get in return from him?

N—O—T—H—I—N—G.

And until you smash the alliance between the underworld and certain corrupt policemen and judges, you will continue to get NOTHING.

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

SELL OLD FLINN RESTAURANT

The Royal Restaurant, 320 Diamond street, has passed from the hands of the Philip Flinn estate, which has operated it for 33 years.

The property has been conveyed to Maurice B. Collins of the Commonwealth Real Estate Company who has leased it to Andrew Meehan, said to be connected with interests which have managed the Seventh Avenue Hotel.

The new management is to take possession Saturday. Extensive remodeling is planned, it is reported.

The late Senator William Flinn was interested in the restaurant as a hobby. For many years it was a gathering place for politicians and prominent downtown business men.

The lot, 30x120 feet, includes a two-story brick building.

Army Vet Of McKees Rocks Meets Old Friend Of Family

Tells How "The Family Physician" Medicine Keeps Him, Wife and Three Children Always In Pink of Condition

"I couldn't believe my eyes when I first saw "The Family Physician" Medicine advertised at the Sun Drug Store, 211 Diamond St. It was like meeing an old friend. For my mother used to break up my coughs, colds, fevers and constipation with this wonderful old medicine, and for years now my wife and I, and our three children have never been without it. At times I have had to pay a lot more than the small price now asked, but Family Physician Medicine is worth its weight in gold," recently stated J. Nelson McClure, contracting decorator and former member of the U. S. Army, now residing at Chartiers Ave., McKees Rocks.

"I don't know how many heartaches, worries and downright panics "The Family Physician" Medicine has saved us; but every time one of the youngsters gets out of sorts, we give him a dose or two and he's soon playing about as spry as a kitten. I used to send all the way to Baltimore for Family Physician Medicine, and I'm glad I can get it here. I'd just as soon go without bread or salt in the house to be without "The Family Physician" medicine."

Get a bottle of "The Family Physician" Medicine today at any Mayflower Drug Store, or see the special representative at Sun Drug Store, 211 Diamond st. Learn how swiftly it breaks up children's little ills—colds and coughs; upset stomach; constipation and feverish spells. DON'T WORRY while you wait for the doctor. Give them "The Family Physician" Medicine and be easy in mind and heart.

BEER LICENSE DEADLINE TONIGHT

County Treasury Ban On Applications Due With 4,000 on File

With a chorused sigh of relief a ozen clerks in the County Treasurer's office today prepared to shut heir books and exclaim emphaticlly:

"No more beer!"

In other words, if your applicaion for a beer license hadn't been led today, you can't peddle the tuff until next year.

Acting Treasurer A. E. Anke, ith a futile attempt to erase rom his brow the wrinkles that he confusing beer license bill has aused, admitted that 4,000 aplications have been made. The ermits will be sent out next eek.

With 4,000 applications, Allegheny County probably will lead ll other counties in the state, hiladelphia County, largest, reorting less than 3,000.

Four thousand permits would nrich the county coffers by almost 1,000,000.

Meanwhile the license law was t the mercy of various county reasurers throughout the state— nd the interpretations were nuerous.

In Beaver County the law met s first test. Refused a license ecause its lodge was unincorpoated, the Monaca Eagles appealed the courts. And Judges Frank eader and W. A. McConnell deided that, even if unincorporated, e club might obtain a retailer's cense. Thus the first test is a efeat for the County Treasurer.

Several tests are expected in Alegheny County, in view of the ttorney General's opinion that censes could be granted throught the year. Acting Treasurer nke disagrees with the Attorney eneral's interpretation in a few ther points, too.

AUTOISTS HELD IN BOY INJURY

Despite their emphatic denials f guilt, Harry Harris, of 1844 Webster avenue, and Israel Goodnan, of 3515 Beechwood bouleard, today had been held for ourt on a charge of failing to ender assistance after an automobile accident.

State highway patrol officers estified before Justice of the Peace James Hernon, of Sharpsburg, that Harris and Goodman were occupants of a machine that truck Claude McGuire, 12, a Juvenile ourt ward, at Woolslayer nd Friendship avenues, March 22. The two men are alleged to have picked the youth up, driven him to East Liberty and permitted him to alight after giving him a dime. He was later found to have suffered a fractured shoulder.

GROVE CITY BAN ON BEER UPHELD

SHARON, Pa., May 25.—(AP.)—Grove City, temporarily halted from banning the sale of beer, may now enforce the ordinance if it sees fit.

Judge J. A. McLaughry yesterday dissolved an injunction granted on April 10, preventing officers from making arrests under the ordinance.

The judge held the injunction "noxious and offensive" and asserted the Court of Equity, which heard the case, had no jurisdiction to continue preventing enforcement of the measure.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

WASHINGTON, May 25.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Back in here to see the "Morgan Follies." You know he has made himself a mighty pleasant and agreeable witness. This "preferred list" that they read, everybody that's not on it is knocking it. Some think the whole trial won't do much good, but anytime one-half learns how the other half lives it does us all good.

Will Rogers

You see there is a lot of things these old boys have done that are within the law, but it's so near the edge that you couldn't slip a safety razor blade between their acts and a prosecuion. Yours, WILL.

PASTOR, ELDERS OF 3RD U. P. AT PEACE

Commission Restores Harmony at Church Of Dr. Woodfin

The Rev. Dr. William M. Woodfin, pastor of the Third United Pesbyterian Church, said today a harmonious settlement has been reached in the troubles in his congregation which caused a petition to the Monongahela presbytery for an investigation.

The Rev. Dr. A. Gordon MacLennan, chairman of the commission appointed by the presbytery to consider the difficulties at the Third church, declared the commission succeeded at a meeting last night in harmonizing the elements for and opposed to the pastor.

Dr. Woodfin today said:

"I am very happy over the solution of the unhappy situation. The commission exercised splendid wisdom and good counsel to bring about a harmonious solution of a vexing problem. Nothing but the spirit of God in the hearts of all concerned could arrive at so happy a solution."

According to reports, the pastor will continue his work at Third Church after a short vacation.

The gathering last night was a congregational meeting, at which Dr. McLennan presided. Dr. Woodfin was present.

'NO VICTORY, NO DEFEAT'

The meeting had been scheduled two weeks ago following the adjournment of an ecclesiastical gathering at which complaints had been aired against the pastor by elders of the church. He was upheld by the congregation, 270 to 36, at the former meeting.

Dr. MacLennan announced the settlement of the case. He did not go into details, simply stating:

"The controversy has been settled. No one has won; no one has lost. There has been no victory; there has been no defeat."

Dr. Ben G. Graham, trustee, and Ira Gribben, elder, concurred in Dr. MacLennan's statement. The congregation, by a rising vote, agreed to the commission's decision.

PLAN NEW ELECTION

Whatever was "settled," grew out of the differences between Dr. Woodfin and the elders of the church. At the previous meeting, he charged them with giving him "his loneliest hour in the ministry."

One result of the controversy is that there will be an election in two weeks for a new board of elders at the church. The present life membership system of elders has been supplanted by a rotary system approved by the Presbytery.

BALM EVIDENCE CONCLUDED

Testimony in the alienation of affections suit against Judge Elder W. Marshall was concluded today, but final arguments and the charge to the jury were deferred until court reconvenes tomorrow.

Thomas McMinn, former feed store manager, of Swissvale, charges that Judge Marshall stole the affections of his wife. The defense contends there was no estrangement and that the suit was an extortion scheme.

Mrs. Josephine Kilman, of Baltimore, an investigator testified today she had been present when McMinn hugged and kissed his wife and she referred to him as "nice." This was after their purported separation, she said. She told of numerous occasions on which McMinn and his wife went out together and that once she accompanied them to a movie.

Several witnesses, including Attorney Harry W. McIntosh, testified the reputation of McMinn and his wife for veracity and honesty was "bad."

Records of two hearings before Masonic committees in Wilkinsburg were entered in the record by Attorney Oliver K. Eaton for the defense.

BARBER RACKET JAILS 3 HERE

Dissension rose to the surface again today in Pittsburgh's barber war when three reputed members of the barbers' union were arrested on complaint of Michael DeRose, who told detectives all his profits were going to replace broken windows in his barber shop at 439 Climax street.

The three men, whom, DeRose alleges tried to get him to join the union three months ago, were Dave Hughes, 407 Gearing avenue; John F. Cochrane, 604 Beltzhoover avenue, and Frank Kouff, 413 Climax street. They will be given a hearing tomorrow on suspicious person charges.

Upon his refusal to join the union and raise his prices, DeRose told city detectives, his life was threatened and his shop windows were stoned.

Doctor Sent Her Away, Then Sued, Wife Says

Mrs. Stefani Rose Lang, handsome Vienna brunette, who charges that her husband, Dr. E. J. Lang, East End, sent her to Austria and then applied for a divorce, yesterday asked Judge Frank P. Patterson for alimony.

After her counsel, John J. Kennedy, told the court Mrs. Lang was penniless, Judge Patterson directed that her husband pay her $25 a month and $50 counsel fees until further order.

Mrs. Lang, who is living with friends at 1134 East street, Wilkinsburg, related that she was married to Dr. Lang in Vienna in September, 1931, while he was studying there.

After they took up their residence here he told her, she testified, that because of economic conditions it would be cheaper for her to return to Europe. She left this country last fall, she said, and after failing to hear from him for several months, she borrowed money to return to America. Arriving, she found the divorce action pending, and plans to contest it.

Attorney Bradley Burns, representing Dr. Lang, told the court his client's income was greatly depleted by the depression. For that reason, Judge Patterson said, he directed the payment at only a nominal sum.

History Through Keyholes and By Tapped Wires

-By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER-

The Senate committee continues ts indoor Olympics.

Result of investigations convinces us that the only way to learn your nation's history is over a tapped wire.

Four years at a keyhole is a lesson in international finance. Why build all those magnificent monuments to progress and industry when most directors' meetings have been held under flat stones?

Well, we're learning how the big boys make an honest dollar out of four pewter quarters.

That's something. In the meantime, stocks, cotton and wheat all jumped from one to five points yesterday.

We're so tough now that bad news is a tonic.

MATE JEALOUS, WIFE ASSERTS

Mrs. Carrie Grace Burkey testified yesterday in contesting the divorce action of John O. Burkey, West View, postal railway clerk, that he was unduly jealous.

Mrs. Burkey, who lives in Western avenue, said he would not allow her to attend card parties, and made unjust accusations.

She denied she had been more than properly friendly with two dentists or any other men. She played golf with the dentists by Burkey's permission, she said.

Mrs. Burkey told Judge W. H. McNaugher she never had a nightgown delivered at a downtown hotel. The garment, she testified, was delivered at her home.

Robert H. Henderson, principal of the school, opened the program by praising the recent proclamation of President Roosevelt, setting aside "Child Health Day."

THREATS SENT GIRL FLIER

Postoffice authorities and county detectives are investigating the sending of threatening letters to Miss Downie Tepsic, student pilot at the County Airport.

Miss Tepsic, a student at Penn School of Aviation, has been receiving the anonymous threats, signed only by three crosses, for more than a year, it was revealed today.

Believed at first to be the work of some practical joker, Miss Tepsic paid no attention to them. When the notes continued she turned them over to postal authorities.

The last threat, contained on a postcard was mailed to Miss Tepsic several days ago. She refused to discuss it, or tell what the threat contained.

WATER FLOODS STREET, HALTS TRAFFIC

Hillsides and Gardens Washed Away by Downpour

Traffic in many sections of the city and county was halted by the violent rainstorm which washed mud and debris into the streets and damaged gardens and young lawns.

The heavy rainfall brought the 3 o'clock temperature of 84 degrees, the season's highest, to 65 degrees at 7 p. m. The rain gauge at the Weather Bureau measured 1.14 inches at 9:50 p. m.

Seventy-five feet of retaining wall in Serpentine drive, Schenley Park, was washed down when water filled the road. Capt. Thomas Lyons and Lieut. Richard Payne closed the road in fear of additional slides.

AUTOS STRANDED

Many automobiles and street cars were halted, some almost an hour, when the rain turned streets into temporary creeks.

In Washington boulevard, near the new Allegheny River boulevard, scores of automobiles were marooned. East End police and firemen, using tow lines, pulled most of the cars out.

Water was reported curb-high in many East End intersections when the sewer outlets became filled. A half dozen minor earth slides occurred in Bigelow boulevard. Many sections of East street were filled with mud washed down from the hillsides.

LIGHTNING HITS CHIMNEY

Driving became hazardous when a film of slimy mud covered the streets, particularly in Mansfield avenue in the West End, where traffic was brought to a snail's pace.

Lighting struck a chimney on the home of George Shaeffer, Williams and Colton streets, Millvale, sending a shower of bricks to the street. There was no fire.

DOG SOUNDS FIRE ALARM

The barking of Prince, a police dog, not only gave warning of a fire but also saved Prince's life on the North Side today.

Prince was sleeping in the one-story storage room of Hahn & Malloy Company, at 836 Spring Garden avenue. When fire broke in a sawdust bin his barking awakened a neighbor, William Jost, who rescued the dog.

Speedy Car Held Ready To Join Maug Chase

A speedy automobile equipped with tear gas bombs, riot guns and bullet proof vests for county detectives has been ordered kept in readiness day and night for a chase after the escaped convicts, John Maug and Edward Turpack. District Attorney Andrew T. Park has ordered the car prepared, with a driver on duty at all times.

County detectives still are smarting over the escape of two men believed to be Maug and Turpack from a quarry at Fest Homestead. At that time the fugitives had a car much speedier than that driven by the county sleuths.

The car in which the two men escaped was owned by R. W. Jones, of 1026 Milton street, from whom it had been stolen. Commissioners have notified Jones they will pay the bill of $16 for repairing his car, bullet-riddled during the chase.

An emergency conference to organize the dry forces of Allegheny County against the repeal of the state prohibition laws has been called for June 2 at the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street near Penn avenue.

John McSparran, state secretary of agriculture, and Dr. Omer B. Poulson, active in the state dry organization, will speak.

TRUCE HALTS JAP ADVANCE

PEIPING, May 25.—(AP.)—Indications accumulated today that a truce had been reached in the North China fighting, although both Japanese and Chinese authorities were reluctant to admit it or discuss the situation.

Definite information was received that the Japanese advance had been halted, while Chinese forces were withdrawing to a line cutting across North China which was understood to be one of the main points of the reputed armistice agreement.

Foreign military observers also were in the dark concerning the truce, but they declared the present military position was "consistent with a truce."

JAP DELEGATES MEET HULL

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(AP.)—Economic and monetary problems that tangle the international situation were gone over today by the Japanese delegation to the London conference with Secretary Hull at a formal State Department conference.

This was a prelude to a busy day for the Japanese. On the program was a luncheon by Secretary Hull for Viscount Ishii, head of the visiting delegation; a private conference between him and President Roosevelt, and a dinner tonight at the Japanese embassy, followed by a reception.

While the program was confined to economic subjects, other weighty questions hovered in the background, including the question of the open, although undeclared, warfare between Japan and China which has disturbed world diplomacy for two years.

PA. SALES TAX FIGHT PRESSED

HARRISBURG, May 25.—(AP.)—Continuation of the campaign against renewal of a state retail sales tax was stressed today at the first annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Retailers Association.

The association plans a vigorous drive to prevent its re-enactment at the special session of the Legislature late this year or early in 1934.

Harry D. Adamy, Wilkes-Barre, vice president, warned the retailers against thinking "the sales tax fight is over."

Adamy and other speakers emphasized the importance of cooperation between the retailers and the newspapers.

He said retailers have discontinued costly "experiment" and "have come to the realization that the newspaper is, after all, the most direct and most productive medium of sales promotion."

Col. Ernest G. Smith, Wilkes-Barre publisher and president of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association, traced the relationship between advertising and the press.

Col. Smith declared advertising is as much a part of the mission of American newspapers as is spot news dissemination. They constitute "an ideal combination of increasing fascination, interest and demand at the hands of America," he added.

Flying, Like Golf, Requires Form, Bill Learns

Instructor Goes Up With Student to Check Work

WIN YOUR WINGS
Installment No. 11

Most of Bill's flying was now solo, although at frequent intervals Jack Miller would go up with him to check up and make sure he was progressing along the right lines. Explaining these check flights to Bill Jack said:

"Flying is a lot like golf. A great deal depends on your form. In golf if your swing is wrong you play a bad game. In flying if you don't co-ordinate the controls properly the plane skids or slips in turns.

"It doesn't matter much as long as things are going along all right, but sloppy air work means lost speed and altitude. In a tight place you can't afford to lose.

"Right now you are forming your flying habits, and they are going to stick with you always. That's why it's so important for you in the early stages to get the best possible instruction, and why I keep such a close watch on you.

"In open ships you can tell when you are flying properly by the feel of the wind on your face. When you are right, the wind will be flowing straight past you, but when you are down in the cockpit you will hardly be able to feel it.

"The minute you get a draft on the side of your face though, you will know that something is wrong, and can correct it. You find that it will generally happen in turns. A draft on the inside means that the ship is slipping because you are giving her too much aileron. A draft on the outside means too much rudder, which is making you skid.

"Stick to the open ships until that part of it comes instinctively to you, and, incidentally, the more open they are the better. Big windshields and deep cockpits make it harder for you to tell when things aren't going just right. Once co-ordination and precision become second nature to you, you won't have any trouble with cabin jobs."

"I understand," Bill nodded.

"Just one more thing, remember—never take a chance. For instance, you will notice that you have never been allowed to go up without a parachute. Some places, I know, will let you fly without one, but since there is such a thing as a parachute, why not wear one, although the chances are a million to one you will never have to use it?"

"I realize that," said Bill, "and you can bet that I am never going to be one of these 'show-off' flyers."

"That's the stuff," said Miller. "Now go and put in about half an hour on that ship there," he indicated the nearest of three training planes standing on the apron.

Bearing in mind what his instructor told him, Bill spent the remainder of the week practicing carefully, and continually watching the precision of his work.

Stresses Importance Of Correct Habits At Stick

He was improving fast, and although every now and then he did have some difficulty, it was becoming easier and easier to handle the ship properly. Taking off now presented no difficulties, and nine times out of ten he could land within the required 500-foot area. In fact, most of the time he was bringing the plane down within 200 feet of the mark.

Answer these questions:

29—What is the teletype used for?

The Sun-Telegraph will publish in 12 installments the serial "Win Your Wings," the experiences of a student pilot. Three questions relative to aviation subjects will be printed each day, the answers to each being contained in some previous installment.

Read each day's installment and answer the questions. Thirty-six questions must be answered. When your list of questions and answers is complete, send them to the "Win Your Wings" Contest Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Telegraph Square, Pittsburgh, together with an essay of not more than 250 words on "Why I Want to Fly."

Questions and answers must be accompanied by essay.

They might have called it: "MURDER ON THE MOUNTAINSIDE"

IN THE Allegheny Mountains, last August, cars and gasolines were "taken for a ride" such as they had never known before. One after another they were lashed up the mountainside . . . pistons pumping furiously, tires creaking at every curve, bolts and bodies straining almost to the breaking-point. Here was a test of tests . . . a mighty experiment on the part of the Nation's leading automobile and refining companies to find ways to bring you better engines and better fuels. ATLANTIC participated. For months since then, it has been carrying on the work. And it has produced an amazing new motor fuel!

HILLS MELT AWAY BEFORE IT

YOU can't pour the NEW ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH onto the top of a mountain and have that mountain literally melt away, like ice cream under an August sun.

But you can pour it into the tank of your automobile and enjoy much the same effect, as far as driving is concerned. For this great new fuel is, we sincerely believe, more powerful than any product ever offered, at or near its price.

It is crystal clear. Contains no gum. Has no unpleasant odor. Brings you greater value than ever. The sooner you try it, the quicker you'll agree with your friends: "The NEW WHITE FLASH is POWERFULLY BETTER."

A bride of this afternoon will have a lovely garden setting for her wedding, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Hugh Rodman, of Oakmont. The bride will be Eleanor Evans, daughter of the late Thomas Mellon Evanses, and the bridegroom, John Cecil Norman, son of the Jonathan Van Dyke Normans, of Louisville, Ky. The ceremony will take place at 5:30 o'clock.

The bride will wear her mother's wedding gown of ivory crepe and chiffon with a fischu of chiffon tying in the front, and a veil of tulle, finished with a cap of rose point lace which belonged to her grandmother. And she will carry delicate white iris.

Her attendants will all wear gowns alike, of apple green chiffon, having short puffed sleeves, ruffled collars, and wide sashes of the chiffon. Their hats will be white and their bouquets will be made of white summer chrysanthemums and maidenhair ferns. They will be her cousin, Mary Rodman, as maid of honor; Elizabeth Boyd, Kathleen Hays Guthrie, Mary Mellon McClung and Mary Cecil Norman, sister of the bridegroom. Mrs. Rodman will wear beige lace with a hat to match, and blue iris.

Jonathan Van Dyke Norman will be his brother's best man, and ushers will include Edward Nobbe, John Neville Blakemore, of Louisville; Thomas Mellon Evans, brother of the bride, and her cousin, Hugh Rodman, Jr.

The bride's table at the wedding dinner will be decorated simply with garden flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Norman will be at home in Louisville early in June.

Seen at Nixon

Walter Hampden attracted a few of our socialites and many from university circles to the Nixon last night where he appeared in "Caponsacchi." With a group of the younger set was Laura Evans in a flowered chiffon—bright red, green and deep blue on a white background. The frock had a cape, cut deeper in the back than in front.

Others I noticed were Helen Leovy, Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins, Clara Dorothea in red crepe, Elizabeth in black with a bodice of white chiffon.

Women's Part Important Head Tells Federation

RICHMOND, Va., May 25.—(AP.)—Women of America today were called upon to so live that their actions will speak louder than words in bringing about "a rebirth of an old world into a new day." From the Federation's biennial council here, this message above all others is the one Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Club, says she wants to convey to the club women of the United States.

Mrs. Poole said, in part:

"We have been all too ready and willing in these chaotic times to use the alibi that because the way is not clear we cannot unite upon a plan of action.

"The objectives of living have not changed in the least. We want a chance to earn an honest living, and we want the opportunity for every child to be normally born, properly educated in a world that gives to him a background of good government, Christian living and honest citizenship."

70 Tee Off in First Day Of Woman's Golf Tourney

More than 70 women, representing every country club round about, teed off at the Allegheny Country Club yesterday in the first golf day of the Woman's Golf Association.

There were spectators, too, for the event, and many came to luncheon who didn't play. Several of the spectators were knitting beneath the shade of lemon-yellow and blue-green striped umbrellas flaunting colorfully against a background of the large white clubhouse having tall, green trees on either side.

One of the smartest dresses worn by the players was that chosen by Althea Robinson. It was of pink, fine silk jersey with a smart Ascot tie in front, fastened with a gay red button and with a red button fastening the bodice in back. And yesterday she had the back unbuttoned to court sun tan.

Nancy Byers, who played early in the morning, and had a net score of 77, chose a cool green cotton frock. She was sitting with Mrs. James Stuart Brown checking off the players as they started off.

Ever so different looking was the fine gingham sports dress Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland wore. It was brown, marked off into little squares with lines of white. Her partner was Mrs. H. H. McClintic, Jr., in a green seersucker shirtmaker frock.

'A Little Less
(To L. A.)

If you were a little less married
And I were a little less free;
Then all of the things that we dream of
Would be a reality.

We'd comb all the trees with our fingers
And drink till the brooks all ran dry,
We'd tend to that last rose of Summer,
And throw all the seeds to the sky.

Then—nothing would stop us from loving,
And nothing would keep you from me—
If you were a litle less married—

—Gladys Dee.

And She Did!

Helen Morgan went to see a show the other night and came away disappointed. Later, at the Embassy, she remarked how bored she was with it.

"I'm surprised that you didn't like it," sarcastically chirped one of the ineffectuals, "it's been running a long, long time!"

"So has the subway and I don't go for that, either!" barked Helen as she got off the piano so that she could throw it at him.

Sure Sign

Form of Criticism

While sampling the roads in the Grand Concourse sector of New York the other night after 12 o'clock, it was observed:

"The one thing that impresses me up here is how clean they keep the streets."

Merciless Truth

And, adds the Pathfinder to the list of them, the honeymoon is over when the bride stops calling up the groom by phone when he's at work to make him guess who it is.

It Actually Happened

Take it from Jefferson Marchamer, who helped produce The Illustrator's Ball the other sundown. The first call for lovely lookers enticed about 25 vey beautiful things. Only one of them brought along her maw.

When those of the group who "didn't mind posing nude in the tableaux" were asked to raise their hands—the only gal to raise a wing—was the one who brought along her mother!

Heheheh

That one recalls the time Joyce Hawley sat unpeeled in a bathtub loaded with laughing-soup—the orgy that made Earl Carroll's almost bald top balder. Miss Hawley, who didn't know any better at the time, didn't even get paid for the job.

When this fact became gossip among some stage mothers who were babbling, one mamma said:

Track Talk

Things are so bad with the horses, says W. R. McCallister, that they're telling this one around Bowie:

"I got the sure thing in the next," he whispered hoarsely. "It can't miss. Give me your form a minute."

He took the form and proceeded to demonstrate, by threading his way through intricate calculations in past performances, workouts, etc. how impossible it was for anything to head his choice.

"Get a nice bet down for yourself," he concluded eagerly, "and all I ask is that you place a five for me. I'm tell you, friend, they've been waiting for this spot a long time. It's a look."

"I suppose you're right on the inside, eh?" the man snapped nastily to be rid of the pest. "How do you know so much about this horse?"

"I," the other replied, drawing himself up stiffly, "own him!"

You Know the Types

David Murray says: Well, the village blacksmith is no longer located under the Chestnut tree—nowadays the radio comedians are.

We met a super kibitzer the other day. He carries a pocket encyclopedia to prove that you're wrong!

By Way of Report

F. P. A., Bill Corum and some of the other paragraphing princes have been arguing over the value (or waste of time) of schools of journalism. Is training at such seats of learning important? Do the better newspapermen come out of them? Well, we wouldn't know.

In 1923 when the opportunity to enter a school of journalism was offered gratis by a proud relative—we spoke to Glenn Condon, our editor, about it.

"Don't waste your time," he counselled, "if tomorrow you walked into any editor's office looking for a job—and the editor said: 'What experience, if any?' and you said: 'Four years practical experience in a trade magazine office'—you'd get the job!"

Canzonerror!

Johnny Hamon: That was a plot to find out how many readers read without skipping. Should have read McLarnin and Benny Leonard. Anyhow, that's our story and we're stuck on it.

Code

A Hollywood soda-jerker forwards this glossary of soda-fountain lingo out there . . . "Shoot one" and "Draw one" is one coke and one coffee . . . "Shoot one in the red!" means a cherry coke . . . An "echo" is a repeat order . . . "Eight-six" means all out of it . . . "Eighty-one" is a glass of water . . . "Thirteen" means one of the big bosses is drifting around . . . A "red ball" is an orangeade . . . "Squeeze one" is a limeade . . . "Eighty-nine" means that a movie player of importance is in the store, and "Twisted, choke and make it cackle!" means a chocolate malted milk—with an egg in it.

Oop!

I. Hoffman counsels: Knockers never roast people who aren't worth a rap.

Oh, you're just a space filler!

'Always Belittlin'

Hampden in 'Caponsacchi' Gives Fine Portrayal In the Nixon

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Mr. Seibel

Quite a large audience, considering the temperature and the rain, assembled in the Nixon Theater last night to see Walter Hampden play the warrior-priest in the fine "Caponsacchi" tragedy based on Robert Browning's poem, "The Ring and the Book." Hampden is no stranger here and this drama no novelty. It is only needful to reaffirm the judgment pronounced on previous occasions—that here is one of the nobler and more impressive things of the American theater, a moving play acted in dignified fashion.

Four people stood out in the well-rounded cast, besides Hampden. Esther Mitchell is gentle and sweet as Pompilia, the child wife murdered by her husband's bravos. She has the appealing qualities of voice, the calm of soul, that belong to this madonna-like impersonation. Ernest Rowan acts Guido, the cruel and murderous husband, with the ferocity of a virtuoso. William Sauter makes a profoundly dignified final appearance as the Pope who pronounces judgment. And Whitford Kane lends a mild, unctuous humor to his characterization of the sly Canon Conti.

SWIFT-MOVING DRAMA

"Caponsacchi" is swift-moving drama. Based upon one of the longest poems in the world's literature, by one of the most detailed of psychological poets, Arthur Goodrich has turned it into stirring melodrama.

The murder scene is among the ghastliest put on the stage since the Elizabethan blood-and-revenge tragedies. At the same time, the spirit of the poem is so uplifting, in the real sense of that word, that the horror is dissipated by the saintly serenity of the victims.

While the words are mostly Browning's own lines, lifted from their place in the poem, they were never read in a stilted way, and the stage direction had eliminated anything resembling the mechanical dramatics that often mar poetic drama. Hampden's "Caponsacchi" is poetry without being less dramatic, and drama without being less poetic.

PLAYED WITH SPIRIT

While the opening scene at the Carnival of Arezzo fell a little short of carnival boisterousness, every scene that followed was played with more spirit, until the last moments in the papal court rose to a splendid climax of high art.

There are at least two dozen parts of more or less importance, and the excellency of the average was most gratifying. But above all rose Walter Hampden's own portrayal of Caponsacchi—gay at first, courageous at all times, calm in the crisis, firmly eloquent in the tragedy. Hampden's diction is clear—his understanding of the role transparently alive. It is one of the best things he does and one of the best things of our present-day stage.

This evening "Caponsacchi" will be repeated, and in the matinee today "Hamlet," Shakespeare's greatest tragedy, will be given.

Mooney Talks On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Tom Mooney, world's most famous prisoner, is seen and heard in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News as he temporarily quits San Quentin Prison in California, to go to San Francisco to open his fight "for liberty or death."

"Any man," he says, "who kills 10 people doesn't deserve life imprisonment. He should be hung. But I am innocent."

The much-heralded "book burning" in Berlin shows thousands of college boys and others of the younger element of Hitler followers gathered around a huge bonfire in front of the State Opera House on Unter der Linden, in Berlin. More than 20,000 volumes, allegedly un-German, are fed to the flames.

Grisha Goluboff, famous 10-year-old violin prodigy, mourns the coming loss of the 200-year-old instrument loaned to him by a German firm, as it has been sent for by the owners. Then he plays "Serenade Melancholio," by Tschaikowsky.

Days of "woman's crowning glory" are recalled in a picture from Los Angeles, which shows Mrs. C. B. McPherson with hair 7 feet 5 inches long. She is preparing to go to the World's Fair as a part of Bob Ripley's "Believe It or Not" exhibit.

Senator Wagner, of New York, in a statement through Metrotone, explains how his bill calling for $3,300,000,000 will give vast powers to the President and aid in economic recovery.

(Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.)

Novice Gets Lead Role

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, May 25.—Sixteen hours after she got off a transcontinental train, Paramount's new starlet, Elizabeth Young, found herself with her first movie part—and, what is more, a lead.

The youthful actress, daughter of a New York judge and graduate of an exclusive girl's school, will play opposite Cary Grant in "Big Executive."

Still thrilled over signing her contract and coming to Hollywood, pretty Miss Young cried tears of excitement when she told her new-found studio friends of the assignment.

While a novice in the films, the actress has had some stage experience. Her most important part was in "Firebird," with Judith Anderson. Before that she played in stock and, I believe, in one other Broadway production.

This new and comely bidder for Hollywood fame is five feet five inches tall. She has blue eyes and dark hair.

Lionel Is Assigned To Bayou Film

Lionel Barrymore and Madge Evans are the first to be selected for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new untitled story which will have a background of the Louisiana bayous, based on Leo David Freeman's unproduced play, "Dance Hall Daisy." Director Tod Browning, who made a large percentage of Lon Chaney vehicles, is now down in the bayou country selecting locations for this production. The original play has been adapted to the screen by Chandler Sprague and William Faulkner, author of "Light in August" and "Sanctuary."

NEW BEAUTY AT ONCE

LARGE PORES, PIMPLES, BLACKHEADS, OILINESS, or FLAKY SKIN
SKIN FAULTS ALL GONE —CLEAR, FINE BEAUTY BACK AGAIN

I USE IT UNDER MY POWDER SO THAT IT WORKS ALL DAY LONG, TOO

NEW beauty—soft, fine-textured skin—healthy, radiant loveliness! That's what comes to you when you clear away the five common every-day skin flaws that rob you of beauty.

And how to end these skin faults? Correct their cause—the hidden, invisible poisons that gradually clog up the pores. Ordinary soaps and creams fail to reach these poisons—they simply cleanse the surface.

A method has been found that does end pore poisons—a scientific formula that doctors have prescribed for years! It's Noxzema Skin Cream.

How it works

Noxzema is so much more effective because it is medicated, vanishing—because its medication penetrates deeper and purges away all hidden, disfiguring pore poisons—because it beautifies your skin by making it healthy. Its suppling oils and cool stimulating astringents then soothe, soften and refine the coarsened skin texture.

Noxzema works so quickly because it acts all the time—day and night! Massage it in at night after removing make-up. In the morning apply before powdering as a corrective foundation—so it works all day long, too.

Try it tonight and see for yourself why 6,000,000 American women use Noxzema and are delighted with the clear perfection of healthy beauty it brings.

15 CENTS THIS WEEK SO MILLIONS CAN TRY IT...

This week the regular 25¢ jar of Noxzema is reduced to only 15¢. Solution to a Mystery

With the speakeasies cutting their prices in half and plenty of them retiring from business shortly because of the government's action in handing the booze business over to the doctors and the drug stores, it behooves me to pass along this little story as quickly as possible. What this column is going to do without its speakeasy stories I do not know. Just as though things weren't tough enough!

At any rate, in his private apartment above the speakeasy he owns, Charlie Johnson sits at the window and smiles contentedly. And why not? From the speak below, he can hear the sweet strains of a tinkling cash register. And that, dear children, is the sweetest song that mammy ever sang.

Directly across the way, sitting at the window above his own speakeasy, sits Harry Brown. Mr. Brown looks highly dissatisfied. And why not? The only customers to enter his place that day were the waiters and the bartender. And the only time he hears the cash register is when the bartender rings up a "no sale" just to make sure that the thing still works.

At one time Mr. Johnson and Mr. Brown were the very best of friends—and for the breakup of this beautiful friendship each one blames the other. Strangely enough, they are both right.

Highly interesting, isn't it? Well, maybe I don't think so either . . . .

It was about 16 months ago that these two gentlemen first met. Mr. Brown was the proprietor of his own speakeasy, and Mr. Johnson was seeking a job as a bartender. Charlie got the job in okay fashion, but he received plenty of advice at the same time.

Charlie was told in very definite fashion that any money taken across the bar was not to be considered his own. His last three bartenders, Mr. Brown pointed out, had been fired because they didn't understand that rule. There was to be no put and take game in this establishment; it was all put.

All of this, although Mr. Brown didn't know it, was totally unnecessary in Charlie's case. The latter gentleman was perfectly satisfied with his salary—and jobs were very scarce anyhow. So he tossed himself into his job with plenty of vigor and, before the boss knew what had happened Charlie was the favorite hired hand around the speak.

The customers—most of them were males—didn't sit at tables as they had in the past. Instead, they crowded around the bar to talk to Charlie. Since there was more money to be made at the tables, Mr. Brown very quickly took Charlie from behind the bar and promoted him to the headwaitership.

"Charlie," he asserted, "you have been a very capable man around here. I trust you more than I ever trusted anyone, and I am now going to give you a real position here. From now on you are the manager of the entire place, and your salary is increased $20 a week.

"I'm going to take more time off from now on, and you must realize that you hold a very important position. Aside from watching all the help, you will also have access to the safe. And if you'll watch over my shoulder, I'll show you just how important the safe is."

Charlie watched, and Mr. Brown removed an envelope with five $100 bills in it. He tapped the envelope significantly.

"This money," he said, "is to be paid out only in case of a big pinch. I can't afford raids; never liked 'em and never will. I'd rather pay out this $500 than take a chance on losing the whole joint. And if I'm ever away and the thing happens, it will be your job to square it with this money."

He looked at Charlie.

"But remember," he added cautiously, "I don't want any tricks. I trust you completely—but I've got my eye on you. If anything goes wrong, you'll be fired before you know what strikes you. You understand?"

Charlie Johnson nodded and smiled. He understood. . . .

About a month later, Mr. Brown took two days off to run down to Atlantic City. He returned in the early morning, opened his speakeasy and went directly to his safe. He opened it and almost collapsed. The $500 was gone!

He raced over to Charlie's hotel room and awakened his manager. The money was gone. What had happened? To whom had it been paid? What had gone on anyhow?

Charlie was very calm about it.

"It happened late last night" he said. "A revenue man named Jackson—B. B. Jackson—got into the place and made a buy without the slightest trouble. He had us dead to rights, Mr. Brown, and I took the only way out. I paid him off as quietly as posible. He wanted a grand at first, but when he saw the five $100 bills, he settled for those.

"No, nobody saw the payoff, Mr. Brown. You wouldn't expect this Jackson to go for a witness, would you? Well, I paid him—and that's all there is to it. Sorry, but it had to be done."

The proprietor left shortly afterward, but he was by no means satisfied. He had always been suspicious; too suspicious for his own good. He had no reason to suspect Charlie, but he determined to make his own little investigation.

He did—and it was just about 10 days later that he blew into his speakeasy in a violent mood. He had Charlie Johnson dead to rights—for the simple reason that he had been introduced to Federal Agent B. B. Jackson, and Jackson had sworn that he had never taken a dime in Mr. Brown's place.

"You're a crook, a phony and a first-class rat," he told Charlie. "Jackson never got a quarter of that $500, and what's more, he was never in the place. You clipped that $500, and you know you did. Now get out of here before I lose my temper, you louse."

Charlie's expression, as Lynn Overman says, was as cold as a well-digger's lunch.

"All right, Mr. Brown," he returned. "I'll go. But I'm telling you right now that I paid that $500 to Jackson, no matter what he says. And if you say one more word about it I'll push your teeth right down your throat. Goodby and good luck."

Charlie opened a new place right across the way, and, in no time at all, Mr. Brown's best customers had been weaned away. If you'll go back to the beginning of this story, you'll see just how things stand today. Mr. Brown made a terrible mistake in firing Charlie Johnson.

I told you they were both right about the argument. Wanna know why? A newspaper item a few months ago told the whole story.

"George Glynn, notorious shake man," it read, "was arrested this morning by Detectives Fulton and Reeves. On his person were found credentials with which he had been impersonating Federal Agent B. B. Jackson."...

Unpleasant Lesson Often Benefits Young People

Are we our children's keepers?

Is it our job to shield them from danger—fight their battles for them?

Or should they be allowed to cut their own eye teeth and kill their own snakes?

Mrs. Blake would certainly like to know. Personally, she's convinced that, as a doting mother, it's her duty to protect Son John from the wicked wiles of the Vicious Vamp who has him going round in dizzy circles. But how's she going to make Johnny agree with her? Much less the Vamp! And what will happen if Johnny doesn't allow himself to be protected?

Dear Miss Robinson:

I wonder if you can give me an idea what to do about my boy. I can't seem to do a thing with him.

He is just 21, and a fine chap. He has a good job, and until lately he went with a fine crowd of friends, but now I am terribly worried about him.

You see, he has met a woman —a woman older than he, although she doesn't look it. She is 27. She has been married and divorced twice and has a very bad name, which I know to be justified, for I know people who are well acquainted with her, and who are above petty gossip. But she seems to have him hypnotized. He has given up all his other friends for her, and the crowd he is traveling with now is anything but good.

I have tried talking to him. In fact, I have tried everything I can think of to discourage this silly and dangerous infatuation of his. But he won't listen to a thing I say.

SEES TROUBLE AHEAD

If I try to tell him anything about her, he just gets mad and says that the people who talk about her are just a lot of mean gossips; that she is a badly misunderstood and maligned girl, and he is going to stand by her.

It wouldn't be so bad, if she weren't leading him a merry chase. She has several other men on the string, and really doesn't discourage him. He is so mad about her that, when she treats him badly, he just goes around looking like death—hardly eating, and even neglecting his work.

I know there is dreadful trouble ahead for him, if he can't be made to see her as she is and get free of her.

What on earth shall I do? How can I save him?

MRS. A. BLAKE.

Yes, my dear, that's a tough spot for any mother to be on. There isn't any crueler suffering than the agony of seeing someone you love wrecking his or her life, while you stand by powerless to help; and you wouldn't be human if you didn't want to save him.

But it can't be done!

MUST SAVE HIMSELF

John, himself, is the only one who can save John—and unless you let him do the job for himself, you'll be harming him worse than any vamp ever could.

But she'll make a mess of him? Yes, she probably will. But a messed-up life isn't the worst thing that can happen to a headstrong young man. Often, indeed, it's the best thing—and infinitely better for him than a crippled life, which will surely be his if you insist on doing his batting for him.

So keep hands off, my dear. He's in for a hard jolt, but if you've put the right stuff in his character, he'll come through a stronger, wiser man than if you saved him from himself.

Be ready with your love and sympathy, when he does wake up. Encourage him to put it all behind him, and forge ahead as if it had never happened. That is all you can do. It is all you have a right to do.

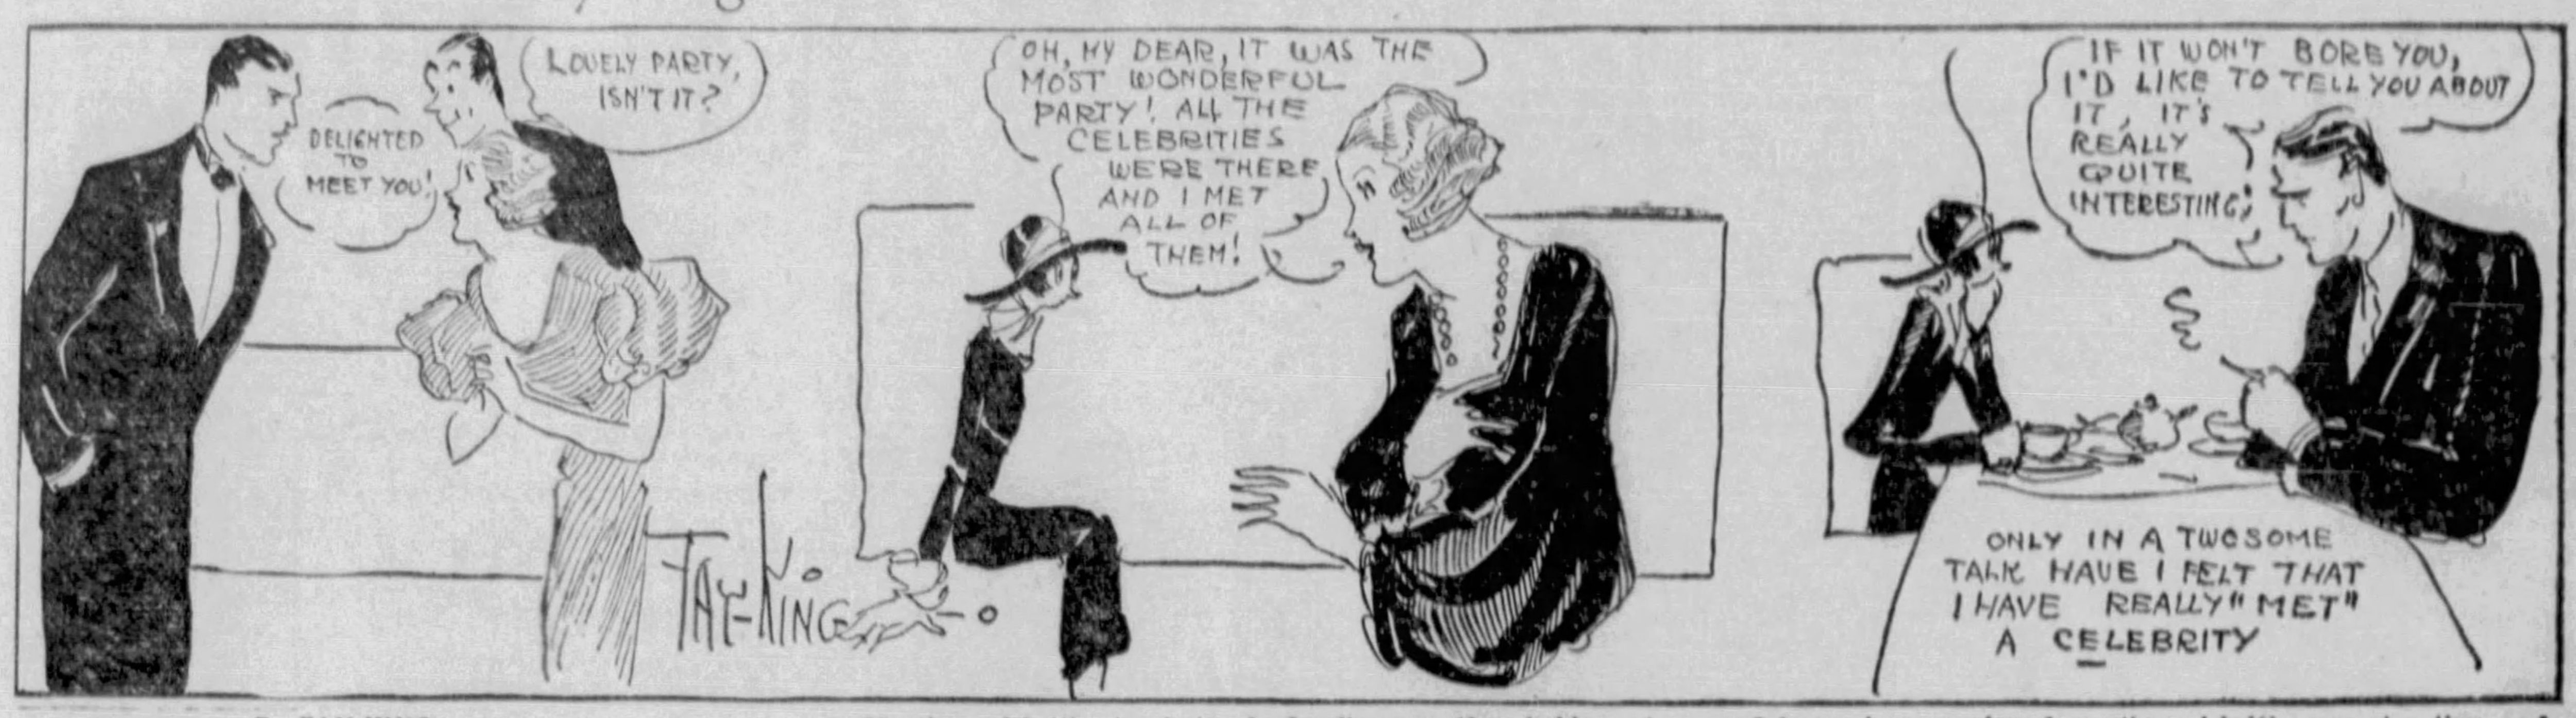
Fay King Prefers to Meet Celebrities One at a Time



DELIGHTED TO MEET YOU!
LOVELY PARTY, ISN'T IT?
FAY-KING
OH, MY DEAR, IT WAS THE MOST WONDERFUL PARTY! ALL THE CELEBRITIES WERE THERE AND I MET ALL OF THEM!
IF IT WON'T BORE YOU, I'D LIKE TO TELL YOU ABOUT IT, IT'S REALLY QUITE INTERESTING;
ONLY IN A TWOSOME TALK HAVE I FELT THAT I HAVE REALLY "MET" A CELEBRITY

By FAY KING

I've never been a party hound.

Being one of a large gathering never appeals to me.

It is only a matter of being one "among those present" where "a good time was had by all."

Meeting celebrities in clusters is hardly more than looking at a group picture in a magazine. It's all just a gesture of polite conversation, and you come away remembering little of any of them.

I have always preferred meeting celebrities one at a time, and having a real talk over a cup of tea. They are at their best then. Persons express themselves freely and frankly only when alone with one other.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Ronald Steal Off to the Bandit Car

As the voice of the man behind the halted car snarled, "Come and get her then!" Ronald clutched my hand tightly.

I clutched his arm with both my hands, retarding—for an instant that I knew could not last —his attempt to leap out of the car door.

"I want you to," I uttered the only words that would delay him, "but you must climb the fence and run along the fields inside. If you go along the road, you won't get there alive. By the fields, you can get in back of the car. And I'm going with you."

He did not hear the last words. He had wrenched himself free with a gasping, "All right. I'll go by the fields," and leaping out of the car, he stole to the fence with more caution than I had feared he would display, and vaulted over it.

I was close behind him, but I had to climb the fence instead of leaping over it as he had done, and by the time I was safely over, he was out of sight in the darkness.

He was still moving cautiously, I deduced, for I could hear no sound of his progress. And I flattered myself that my own movements could not be heard from the other side of the road. I had stepped into the open, plowed field as soon as I was clear of the fence, and hurried along it, my shoes sinking into the soft earth, but free from the danger of leaves that would rustle and vines that might trip me.

SUSPICIOUS OF NICK

I had no compunctions about leaving the car in which I knew Nick expected both Ronald and me to stay until he should give us other directions. I knew by this time, if indeed, I ever had doubted it, that Nick had no touch of altruism in the aid he was giving me with my quest for Marion. A whim, a gesture, a desire to "show off" even though the showing might involve death or wounds, these were his motivations—although I was conscious that my objective which had led me to accept his offer of a lift might well fit in with some ulterior—perhaps sinister—plan of his own for engaging the henchmen of "Jerry" in conflict.

I was sure of something else also, that Nick had some scheme in his head concerning me at which I well might quail. And I distinctly feared that, even if by this sortie of his and Tony's against the men whom they evidently considered to belong to Jerry's organization, Marion's rescue from Charles Owen should be accomplished, we all might find ourselves in the time-honored predicament of jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

I recalled Nick's characterization of Jerry, that he would "slit his own mother's throat for a nickel," and shivered with the conviction that both Tony and Nick could in all probability be arraigned upon the same charge.

MADGE'S PLAN

I had only the haziest sort of plan for this advance of Ronald's and mine along the field paralleling the road from which every second I expected to hear the bark of revolvers. I had an intuition, unwarranted, yet persistent, that Charles Owen had alighted from the car at that alarm, and was carrying Marion out of range of possible revolver bullets. If he were alone, I told myself grimly, it should not take long for us to wrest Marion from him. I used the plural of the pronoun deliberately, and put my hand upon the little silencer pistol which Lillian long ago had given me, and which I had tucked into my gown before leaving the hotel. Indeed, so savage was my own wrath against Charles Owen, so great my confidence in Ronald's similar feeling, that I felt sure we could get Marion away from him, even if he kept a guard close by.

It was not hard to figure out Owen's probable course of action. He would try to get back to the shelter of Jerry's as soon as he could, leaving his hired gunmen to resist this unexpected attack as best they might. But, burdened with Marion, he could not hope to get to the doubtful shelter of those gates before Ronald and I should reach him.

I was almost running now over the plowed fields, would have been racing madly if I had not feared the delay which a stumble would give me. And then, there came from the road the bark and flash of revolvers.

Contract Bridge -:- -:-

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Underbidder

In Contract Bridge, unquestionably women are more inclined to underbid than men. Women are naturally conservative and are content, as a rule, with small but what they think are sure gains, while men are naturally gamblers and will risk much, particularly if the reward of success appears to them as promising to be adequate.

As a matter of fact, underbidding is a much more dangerous vice than overbidding. The losses suffered through failure to make games and rubbers may be visible, and the chronic underbidder may criticize unsparingly the chronic overbidder who goes down 500 points, vulnerable, to save an adverse game. The same person, however, would keenly resent any criticism of his game when he reached the contract of two and made four, or three and made five, and on the next hand saw the opponents make a game and rubber and, possibly, a Slam.

This discussion was brought about by a hand I watched recently in a New York Bridge club—a hand that had an unfortunate denouement.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

West	North	East
	♠A 7 4 ♡A K ◇A 9 8 7 6 ♣10 4 3
♠10 6 5 2 ♡9 5 4 3 ◇5 3 ♣Q 9 5	North West East South	♠K J 8 3 ♡10 6 2 ◇10 4 2 ♣K J 7
	♠Q 9 ♡Q J 8 7 ◇K Q J ♣A 8 6 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass (1)	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡ (2)	Pass	2 ♡ (3)	Pass
2 N T (4)	Pass	3 ♡ (5)	Pass
Pass (6)	Pass

1—In my opinion, the hand is too strong to pass, even though it offers a very difficult choice of an opening bid. I think the proper bid here would be one club.

2—While the heart suit is what shaded, this bid is, no doubt, better than two diamonds. The alternative, in view of the pass, would be two notrump.

3—Not a good bid, but North, it must be confessed, faces a difficult decision. The diamond suit is not rebiddable, yet clubs and spades both appear to offer no prospect of game, and partner passed originally. North cannot be expected to visualize a hand opposite her of more than 3 honor-tricks.

4—Certainly an underbid. The key to South's correct bid is found in the diamond honors. Certainly some stronger bid than this must be found to picture the hand.

5—Not the right response. A preferable bid would be three no-trump, trusting South to defend the club suit.

6—Utterly inexcusable. South must play this hand at game at some declaration. As a matter of fact, six diamonds can be made, although I would not suggest this contract should be reached, and the hand is a lay-down for five hearts or five notrump.

The result of the hand, as I said before, was that, played in three hearts, five were made.

On the very next hand the opponents, also vulnerable, bid and made a Small Slam. While both North and South were guilty of underbidding, South was the greater offender.

TODAY'S QUESTION

♠K Q 8 3 ♡J 10 9 8 7 ◇A K 2 ♣5

Answer—Double. You hold excellent support for the other major and are in a very fine position to make a Penalty Double if the heart suit is rebid.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Never "and Family"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When addressing a card of sympathy, which is proper: To include an in-law in the address or not? For instance, Mr. Brown's father died. Should we address the card to the married son, "Mr. and Mrs. Brown and family," or "Mr. Brown and family?"

P.

Proper Chaperonage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance and I have been going together for the last three years. I am 19 and he is 21 years of age. We have been planning to go on a camping trip with my brother and his wife as chaperons. Do you think this would cause gossip?

AN ENGAGED GIRL.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Asthma Not Incurable Despite Popular Belief

It is a pathetic sight to see the sufferer in an attack of asthma. The victim has marked difficulty in breathing and complains that he is unable to catch his breath. He assumes odd positions in the effort to breathe more freely and get more air into his lungs.

Dr. Copeland

Difficulty in breathing is due to a spasm of the windpipe and of the smaller bronchi, the tubes that bring air to the lungs. At times the sufferer from this disease appears as if he were choking to death. His lips become blue. The face is red and distorted in the effort to breathe.

Fortunately, the attacks are not always so severe. When severe, relief can only be obtained by a hypodermic injection given by a physician or trained nurse. The hypodermic medication is adrenalin. Adrenalin relaxes the muscles of the windpipe and allows normal breathing.

For many years sufferers from this dreaded disease resorted to patent medicines, home remedies and other temporary forms of relief. Cure was not expected. I am glad to say that within recent years many victims of asthma have been cured of this dreadful affliction.

By means of "sensitivity tests" it is now possible in many instances to determine the substances that cause attacks of asthma. Some persons are believed to possess a certain sensitiveness to plants, vegetable dust or certain foods. Once the irritating substance is known, it is possible to diminish the sensitivity by the injection of special vaccines. The vaccine is made from the substances that cause the attack.

In some instances, asthma has been traced to a source of infection within the body. For example, diseased and infected nasal sinuses, teeth, tonsils, appendix, gall bladder or intestines may be the cause. Relief is obtained when the source of infection is removed.

Too often the sufferer from asthma avoids medical advice. He believes he is the victim of an incurable disease. May I warn all my readers against this false notion. Asthma is a difficult disease to cure, but it is not incurable.

A person suffering from asthma must place himself in the hands of a competent physician. Examination of the urine, blood, sputum, X-ray of the lungs and, where indicated, "sensitivity tests," are of tremendous value in bringing about relief and cure. Without these fundamental tests the probable cause of asthma cannot be determined and cure cannot be expected.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of a thorough and complete physical examination by a physician. He will discover physical defects and correct them whenever possible. Habits and manner of living are other factors that must not be overlooked.

Continued attacks of asthma weaken the heart and the lungs. When neglected the disease may prove serious.

DON'T be fooled into believing that your teeth are naturally dull, off-color, or susceptible to decay simply because brushing fails to keep them sound or make them white. Remember this:

Any preparation that polishes teeth and fails to kill germs — millions of germs that swarm into the mouth and cause most tooth and gum troubles —ONLY HALF-CLEANS TEETH.

One dental cream in the world that kills troublesome germs as it cleans the teeth is Kolynos. Try it—a half-inch on a dry brush, morning and night. Soon your teeth will look cleaner than ever before.

This unique, scientific dental cream contains two priceless agents that give the teeth a DOUBLE-CLEANSING. As one foams into every crevice, over every tooth surface and washes away food accumulation, stain and tarnish—the other kills millions of germs.

Thus, in a remarkably short time, teeth are cleaned right down to the beautiful, natural white enamel—without injury. They look more attractive than you ever believed possible. They are safeguarded against decay.

SAFE WAY TO TAKE OFF FAT AND KEEP IT OFF

"I take Kruschen Salts because it makes me feel 100% better and it takes off fat and keeps it off. I take it in hot water every morning, then I can eat as much as I like." Miss Ruth Milner, Des Moines, Iowa. (Jan. 9, 1933.)

Once a day take Kruschen Salts—one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water first thing every morning. Besides losing ugly fat SAFELY you'll gain in health and physical attractiveness—constipation, gas and acidity will cease to bother—you'll feel younger—more active—full of ambition — clear skin — sparkling eyes.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drug store in the world — but demand and get Kruschen, and if one bottle doesn't joyfully please you—money back.

says mother of six young children

You would think that washing for six children, all under eleven years old, would be a tremendous job, but Mrs. Wellington Hunter of Brooklyn, N. Y., just smiles at it. "Washing isn't hard when you don't have to rub," she told us. "I use CHIPSO.

"Five of my children need clean blouses every day for school. And of course I wash daily for the baby. But I don't mind the work because Chipso is quick. I make rich suds with Chipso and the dirt soaks out. It is not necessary for me to do hard rubbing!

"Clothes wear so much longer when they aren't rubbed. They don't get frayed along the edges of the collars and cuffs, nor weak at the knees and elbows. Then, too, Chipso doesn't fade colors. It is safe for everything —even silk underwear and woolens. And it takes so little Chipso to do a big wash. One box every two weeks does all our washing."

Chipso is not adulterated with the harsh substances contained in inferior soaps which gradually weaken fabrics and dull their color. Chipso loosens dirt harmlessly by RICHER SUDS. That is why Chipso-washed clothes stay new-looking for years.

Don't endanger the clothes you have spent good money for by washing them in cheap flakes or strong granulated soaps and powders. Get Chipso from your grocer. At its low price, Chipso is the biggest value in rich, safe soap on the market today!

BUC GAME OFF; COMOROSKY TO STAY

By JAMES J. LONG

Commy's Timely Wallop. First Hit at Right Time. Fourth Win in Overtime. • Martin's Brace Popular. Turf Owner Never Bets. Compromise on Gloves.

GIANT SERIES GIVES BUCS TOUGH JOB

ADAM COMOROSKY surely saved his first hit of the season for a time when it would count for most. Commy almost had become the forgotten man in the obscurity of the Pirate bench, but he served notice yesterday that he still is very much a part of the Gibson outfit. The healthy sock with which he broke up the final battle of the Brooklyn series in an extra frame marked the first time he had hit safely this year, but the wallop won a ball game and more than made up for his six previous failures in pinch-hitting roles. The victory, besides giving the Bucs two out of three from the Dodgers, put the local club back on the winning road in extra-inning games, from which they had skidded when they lost an 11-round tilt in New York. They have now won four out of five overtime struggles.

Adam Comorosky

The home stand against the East reaches its most important stage in the series with the Giants. The latter are Pittsburgh's closest rivals for first place and dangerous from every angle. The hottest fighting of the local season is in prospect over the week-end while the Pirates are trying to square accounts for what Bill Terry's men did to them on the Eastern trip.

THOUGH THEY'RE STILL in last place in the American League, the record of the Red Sox is better than it was a year ago today, when they had won only six games against 27 defeats. The strong Yankee flavor the outfit has taken on is expected to bring big results.

A dozen years ago, playing strength was passing from the Bosox to the Yanks, and the money was going from New York to Boston. Now it's just the other way. The Red Hose have no fewer than six former Yankees on their roster in Henry Johnson, George Pipgras, Dusty Rhodes, Paul Andrews, Dusty Cooke and Bill Werber.

THE VETERAN MINOR league pilot, Spencer Abbott, managing Portland in the Pacific Coast League, may be depended on for several unusual turns each season when games are lost through slips.

Recently Abbott fired Pitcher Jack Wilson for walking a batter with the bases full and forcing home the winning run for Hollywood. "You've got to have control to be on this club," stormed Abbott to Wilson, as he notified the pitcher of his release. "What are you doing on it then?" retorted Wilson, as he packed his kit.

THE BIGGEST AND best pitching staff in the majors and the plugging of the shortstop hole which made possible the return of Frankie Frisch to second base are not the only items that make the Cardinals a club to be feared and one that will be tough to beat out. Pepper Martin spells a lot of additional trouble and danger to all contenders. For the Wild Horse of the Osage is running loose again. He didn't look like much of a third baseman when the Cards played here, and he wasn't breaking any hitting records. But lately he has found himself and once more he is winning games for the Redbirds, clubbing the ball to all corners of the field, and diving and bucking around the bases in a way to recall the feverish days of 1931 when he stole the world series show and ran roughshod over the mighty A's.

Pepper Martin

AND IT ISN'T only in St. Louis that Pepper's evident return to form gives the fans a thrill. It's hailed with pleasure all over the circuit, where game-goers in general have been pulling for a comeback by the player who gave the National League its only world series victory since 1926.

There isn't a spot on the loop where Martin isn't popular. His behavior made him as warm a favorite as did his feats against the Mackmen. He didn't swell up when he was sitting on top of the world, and he didn't whine or squawk when he hit bottom in a disastrous slump last year. The Wild Horse just kept on trying, and his success in fighting his way out is the due reward of a deserving ball player.

ANSWERING SOME QUERIES: E. T., of Pittsburgh, wants to know how many runs count when, with two out and runners on first and third, batter hits a fair ball inside the grounds good for a home run, but after he has scored, the ball is played back to second base and the runner who had been on first when the hit was made is called out for having failed to touch second. No runs count. As the runner had been on first base the out at second amounted to a force play, retiring the side, and no runs can be scored on a force-play third out. It was the same in effect as the Merkle play.

A Connellsville fan asks if a runner can advance when he has reached first base on a missed third strike, catcher's throw to first base goes to right field, and rightfielder makes a wild return, allowing the runner to go all the way round. He can advance and his run counts. Ball was not dead, but was still in play after the missed third strike unless it struck a stand or screen within 60 feet of the plate. H. E. P., of McKees Rocks, asks about the passed ball at Forbes Field last Saturday, when Vaughan was sent back to second base though he had run from first to third on it. It was ruled that the ball had touched the bat boy.

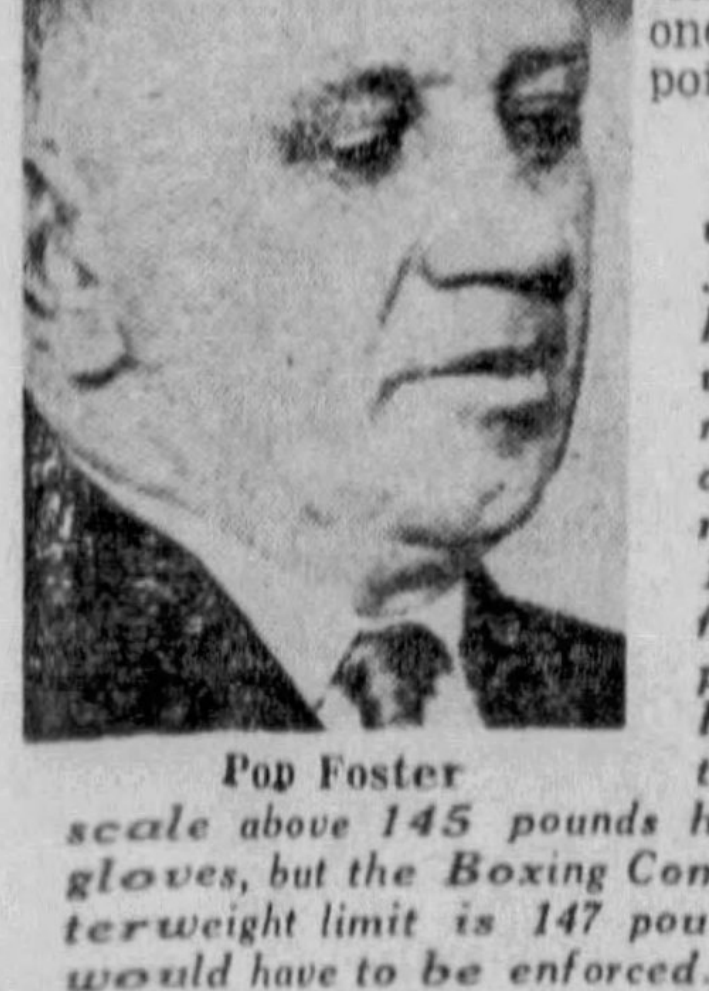
MIDWAY READER ASKS about a play in a Panhandle League game, in which the catcher missed the third strike on a batter, with runners on second and third, and batter returned to his bench; while the ball was being thrown wildly around the infield in an unsuccessful attempt to catch the runners off their bases, the batter who had fanned left his place on the bench, ran to first base and the umpire ruled him safe. The umpire's decision was correct; on such a strikeout the batter is not out until he is put out, and even though he has returned to his bench he has a right to go to first base if he can get there; he cannot be called out for having run out of line unless he did so to avoid being touched with the ball in the hands of a fielder. J. S. H., also of Midway, asks from what club the Giants got Parmalee. With Salem in 1928, Parmalee was with Toledo, then controlled by Giant interests in 1929, and went to the Giants from Toledo in the fall of the latter year. He was farmed to Newark in 1930, and to Columbus in 1931-32. And H. N. A., of Charleroi, is informed that the largest attendance at Forbes Field was 43,810, at the sixth Pirate-Senator world series game on October 13, 1925.

THE HORSES OF William Woodward continue to yield rich returns on the turf. The latest is Brown Betty, which won the One Thousand Guineas in England this year. It was worth a little more than $30,000. Last season she won $15,000, and she cost only $8,000.

But until these winners arrived, Woodward spent a fortune in purchasing stallions and brood mares in building up a stable. And in all the years that he has been on the turf, he has never bet a dollar on one of his horses, not even Gallant Fox, Faireno or Happy Gal.

EVERY YEAR IN St. Louis, Charley Peterson, the trick shot expert, runs a Perpetual Youth Billiard Tournament at 18.2, in which no contestant may enter unless he is past 70 years of age. And every year there is a notable performance.

In the 1933 tourney, Col. Taylor Stith, one of the oldest entrants, recently contributed a feature by running 24 points in one inning and completing his string of 80 points in 16 innings for an average of 5.



Pop Foster

THE ARGUMENT OVER the weight of the gloves to be worn by Jimmy McLarnin and Young Corbett III in their fight for the world welterweight championship in Los Angeles next Monday night ended in a draw and a compromise. The California rules provide that boxers scaling under 145 pounds may wear gloves weighing five ounces, and that fighters above 145 pounds must wear six-ounce mitts. Pop Foster, manager of McLarnin, declared that inasmuch as McLarnin would not scale above 145 pounds he must be allowed to wear five-ounce gloves, but the Boxing Commission took the stand that as the welterweight limit is 147 pounds the rule requiring six-ounce gloves would have to be enforced. Foster refused to give in. He carried the debate right into the offices of the commission and after a 45-minute wrangle with Larry White, manager of Corbett, threatened to call off the fight. Then White offered to split the difference and let McLarnin wear gloves weighing five and one-half ounces. Foster accepted the compromise and the stage is a[illegible]

GAME AT PEAK, GENE, HERE, DECLARES

By TOM BIRKS

Displaying his usual confidence, Gene Sarazen, who flashed to fame when he won the National open championship at Skokie in 1922, while the professional at the Highland Country Club here, returned to Pittsburgh today hailed as the emperor of golf. He was warmly greeted by many old friends, who followed him to the Pittsburgh Field Club for an exhibition match with Joe Kirkwood, the trick shot artist, playing as his partner against Vincent Eldred, now the pro at Highland, and Pete O'Hara, Westmoreland Country Club professional.

Sarazen is on a tour which will continue until he reaches Chicago for the National Open tournament next month. He is traveling in a large Pullman automobile. He has been traveling 24 days, during which time he has played 22 matches. He will appear in Wheeling, W. Va., tomorrow.

EXPECTS TO REPEAT

Holder of both the American and British Open titles, Sarazen expressed confidence in his ability to put up a great fight to retain these laurels this summer. He said his game is as sound as ever, and it will take some truly great golf to beat him.

While his partner, Joe Kirkwood, was giving a demonstration in the sporting goods department of Kaufmann's shortly before noon, Gene discussed many phases of golf with interviewers. Among other things he said he still insisted it was a crime to deprive Billy Burke of a place on the American Ryder Cup team and paid high tribute to the late Hon. James Francis Burke, one of his first supporters.

BRAND VICTOR

Fred Brand's 40-37—77 was good enough to lead the field in the initial one-day tournament of the Pennsylvania State Golf Association, played at South Hills yesterday, as a good sized field battled through a deluge of rain. The Shannopin star, former Penn State luminary, was six over par, but was one shot better than Jim Lappan, of the Field Club, who had a pair of 39 for a 78. Dr. Tom Canon, former Pitt ace, shot a 38-41 for 79 and third place.

The low net prize was won by Carl Vandervoort, of Oakmont, who had a 22 handicap and a score of 66.

At Allegheny, Betty Abernathy, of Oakmont, turned in a card of 42-43—85 to win the honors in the W. G. A. one-day affair, the first of the season. Miss Nancy Byers, of Allegheny, was second with 41-48—89.

Mrs. W. C. Robinson led in the second division with 105-22—83 and Mrs. M. C. Marshall and Mrs. M. Thunhurst, both of Edgewood, tied for the lead in the third flight with net 79s.

Billy Bayne Hurls No-Run, No-Hit Win

MEMPHIS, May 25.—(AP.)—Billy Bayne, left-handed pitcher for the Memphis club of the Southern Association, pitched a no-run, no-hit game against Birmingham yesterday.

He issued no walks and the only man to reach base got there when a Memphis outfielder dropped a fly. Memphis won, 8 to 0.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: EAMON DE VALERA—The president of the Irish Free State was born on Lexington avenue, New York, October 14, 1882. He is thus far the only native New Yorker to be elected ruler of a foreign country. THE MIRACULOUS TRIPOD—The inhabitants of Santiago de Cuba, who have been flocking to view this "walking stick" for lack of a scientific explanation have termed it miraculous. It was cut from a bundle of firewood on the Friday of Pains preceding Good Friday. Its virtue was discovered by children playing with the wood. A HUMAN OYSTER—Two months ago, Franz Hitsch, a farm helper of Austria, made good his boast in the village inn by eating 80 shoenails, in addition to several tacks and copper coins. A few hours later, he awakened in a hospital, where the swallowed hardware had been removed from his vitals by a surgical operation.

A'S BECOME FLAG THREAT

Associated Press.

When Connie Mack sold three star players to the Chicago White Sox and maintained the Philadelphia Athletics still could put a team on the field that would be a pennant contender, echoes of the more or less subdued laughter of the experts rang all around the American League. But it appears that after all the "Tall Tactician" knew what he was talking about.

An outfield consisting of Ed Coleman, Bob Johnson and Roger Cramer, all youngsters; a rookie, Frank Higgins, at third base, and another, Eddie Cihocki, at short, hardly looks like the material of which a contender is made, but with these players, plus Jimmy Foxx, Mickey Coch[illegible] and Lefty Grove, the A's have been winning ball games since they began their home stand against the West.

A week after the season started the Athletics were in the American League cellar. They started hitting on their return home, in 10 days have won seven out of eight games, and have climbed finally into the first division.

They made the final step into fourth place yesterday by walloping the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 4, in a game cut short in the sixth inning by a thunderstorm that flooded the field and started a small fire when lightning struck a recently vacated part of the stands.

Cleveland was rained out at New York. The Chicago White Sox gained second place when they were kept idle at Boston.

The Washington Senators, previous holders of second, ran into Tommy Bridges' second one-hit game of the season and went down a notch as Detroit won, 3-1. Bridges faced only 29 men as he lost a perfect game for the third time in his short career. Joe Kuhel clouted a home run in the eighth.

In the National League the Pittsburgh Pirates increased their lead over New York to three games by pounding steadily at Brooklyn pitching until they won out, 6-5, in the tenth inning. The Cincinnati Reds meanwhile gave the Giants a 3-1 setback.

The Chicago Cubs, after two defeats by the last-place Phillies, turned around and administered a sound 5-2 drubbing to their oppressors.

Boston and St. Louis were rained out.

Hickey Park Bouts Off Due to Five-Day Rule

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

Pittsburgh has just lost its second boxing show within a few days as a result of the decision of the boxing commission that the five-day rule for the filing of contracts for main bouts or substitutions must be enforced.

The Arena, on the North Side, had to cancel its show for tonight when Pete DeGrasse, who was to box Petey Sarron in the main bout, contracted ivy poisoning, and Hickey Park, Millvale, yesterday came to grief when it was learned that Lew Massey, of Philadelphia, who was to box Tony Herrera in its main bout next Monday, had suffered a cut eyeball in his bout with Tony Falco in Philadelphia last Monday night and couldn't come here. Herrera's manager refused to accept Bep Van Klaveren, of Holland, as a substitute, and the commission set last midnight as the zero hour to close a match. When it was not forthcoming, the "no show" notice was sent out.

SEVERO SUSPENDED

The ruling was made to handle the situation whereby four clubs planned to operate during the outdoor season. So far only three clubs are in the field, the North Braddock Bowl, which does not open until next Wednesday, and Hickey Park and the Arena, with Greenlee Field holding off.

Louie Severo, of Meadville, who was to box in the semi-final at Hickey Park Monday night, is suspended for having participated in an unlicensed show recently.

In his 19 battles to date here, Tony Herrera, the best drawing card from out of town who ever showed here, has attracted close to $50,000 in net receipts, according to figures from the records of his manager, Ray Alvis, of Chicago, where Tony makes his boxing headquarters, although his home is in El Paso, Tex.

LONG LOCAL FAVORITE

Tony first boxed around here in 1929 and was a hit from the start. The fans took to his pleasing boxing style and punch and they never seem to grow tired of him. Any time a lightweight develops to the point where he seems to be cock of the walk locally, the promoters bring in Herrera and he cools off the worthy.

In his 19 bouts here, Herrera has won 13 decisions, lost two, to Massey and Johnny Jadick, both of whom he has beaten in other matches, scored three knockouts fought one draw, and engaged in one bout dubbed "no contest" when the referee stopped it because his opponent, Eddie Elkins, entered the ring with a boil on one of his wrists which swelled up like a balloon.

STILL AFTER YAROSZ

The exact net intake for the matches was $48,394. No other boxer ever touched that mark for the same number of bouts, both large and small, here, and we have had some good drawing cards in Harry Greb, Jack Zivic, Buck McTiernan, Johnny Ray, Jackie Rodgers and now Ted Yarosz.

Herrera's three knockouts were and against Joe Glick and Tommy Crowley. Jadick had beaten him at the Meyers Bowl in an earlier meeting and Glick had boxed a draw with him.

According to Alvis, in a letter, Herrera still is anxious to have a fling with Yarosz at any weight. He doesn't know yet that Ted only yesterday announced he is forsaking the welterweight class to box as a middleweight and as such hardly could have any truck with a lightweight or junior-welterweight.

Concluding his letter, Alvis very modestly declares his Tony is the real lightweight champion of the world. Says Tony Canzoneri, the champion, won't have anything to do with him, and neither will Barney Ross, who is matched to box Canzoneri for the title in Chicago next month, nor Wesley Ramey, after a meeting recently in Grand Rapids, in which Ramey received the decision, but, according to Alvis, the newspapers and fans hailed Herrera as the actual winner.

1. Herrera; 2. Ramey (victor over Canzoneri); 3. Steve Halaiko; 4. Young Peter Jackson; 5. Harry Dublinsky; 6. Barney Ross, and,

CAREY IN ROW WITH WILSON, REPORT HERE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The Brooklyn Dodgers' failure to land Outfielder Adam Comorosky to bolster their "sieve" outfield and a reported argument between Manager Max Carey and Outfielder Hack Wilson, of the Brooklyn team, were hot topics of comment among Pirate fans today as the New York Giants landed in town and had their opening game called off on account of wet grounds. Today was to have been Ladies' Day, but the event has been moved back to tomorrow when the same clubs meet in a single game.

DODGERS SEEK COMMY

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph learned from an authoritative source last night that Manager Carey, the Dodgers pilot, had dickered with Manager George Gibson, of the Pirates, relative to a deal which would send Comorosky to the Brooklyn club.

Carey realizes that he has the worst outfield in the National League from a defensive standpoint. Danny Taylor is the only fly-chaser of his club who can measure up to big league standards. O'Doul and Wilson are painfully weak on coming in for lofts or liners and they are just as bad on ground balls.

The little flareup between Carey and Wilson apparently was one of those things that often pop up in a dugout before a game. Although Hack is still a dangerous man at the plate, he, like O'Doul, will kick in many runs. Carey has been shaking up his lineup two or three times a week and when he decided to put the fleet Taylor back in centerfield he was bent upon strengthening the club's resistance.

Wilson, according to his mates, is taking better care of himself than he has at any time in his gripping career. But the opinion of most athletes is that Hack cannot do his stuff in the outfield much longer. The argument he is said to have had with Carey yesterday was reported as having been engendered by a breach of training rules. Whether this be true or not, the army of Brooklyn writers with the club have been agitating Carey to get some defensive strength in his pasture.

REAL BALL HAWK

So it was natural for Carey to go after Commy. In the first place, Max realizes that the Polish Flyer when in his best form is right up with the Waners and Lindstrom as a ball hawk. Moreover, Comorosky has played much of his best ball against the Dodgers in their home lot and the Brooklyn newspapermen are very keen for him; in fact some of them think Carey should give up a valuable pitcher to get him.

The New York Giants today announced that John Salveson, young righthander, had been recalled from the Dallas Club, of the Texas League. He will report when the Gants return home.

Whatever chance Scoops had to getting Comorosky was lessened late yesterday afternoon, when Comorosky, batting in the tenth inning, won the third game of the series with the Dodgers by hitting the ball to the centerfield fence to score Tony Piet and give his club a 6-5 victory over the Flatbush gang.

CHAGNON WINS GAME

The last battle with the Dodgers was a corker with the issue deadlocked on several rallies. Bill Swift and Joe Shaute were the starting pitchers but neither finished. Bill Harris and Leon Chagnon finished for the Pirates, the latter getting credit for the victory.

A three-run homer by Catcher Lopez in the second and Arky Vaughan's homer in the fourth were batting features of the contest. Tony Piet opened the tenth with a double to left and he sprinted to third as Stripp threw out Finney. Commy then batted for Chagnon and laced out his long drive.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

Nick Altrock

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Well, I see the best American and National League athletes are going to play at the Chicago World's Fair next July and the fans of the country will vote for their choices. Uncle Nicholas feels a little too old to run himself, but I will be the Jim Farley for my boss, Joe Cronin, and try to elect him as shortstop.

Joe Cronin, my fellow citizens, is the people's choice. He was born in a log cabin, belongs to 17 lodges, has a lovely radio voice, likes to kiss babies up to 18 months old, is very handy at launching battleships and laying cornerstones, can talk Chinese and is very fond of sailing down the Potomac on off days.

If you elect Joe Cronin shortstop, my friends, it will stabilize our currency, lift the mortgages off farms, grow 17,000 new forests, create new foreign trade, adjust the war debt and wipe out the Eighteenth Amendment. Vote for Joe Cronin, the people's friend. I thank you.

(Tomorrow ought to be a swell day to ask for a raise.)

U. S. NETTERS ADVANCE

AUTEUIL, France, May 25.—(AP.)—Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian, and Mme. Rene Mathieu, ranked first in France, today advanced to the semi-final round of women's doubles in the French hard court tennis championships with a 6-1, 6-0 victory over little Mary Heeley and Freda James, English youngsters.

Helen Jacobs, the United States champion, and her French partner, Ida Adamoff, were eliminated in their quarter-final match, losing to Mme. Henrroting and Colette Rosambert, of France, 3-6, 6-4, 6-0.

Frank Shields, only American man entered in the tourney, and Daniel Prenn, the German champion, advanced to the quarter-final of men's doubles with a walkover, the South African pair of V. G. Kirby and Nat Farquharson defaulting when Kirby injured his foot in practice.

Tartan Trackmen Down Grove City

Carnegie Tech's varsity track and field team was resting today following its successful invasion of Grove City yesterday, when the Tartans defeated the Grovers in a dual engagement, 71½ to 63½.

Tom Coulter, of the Tartan team, won both the 100 and 220-yard dashes and also took first place in the broad jump.

Two Shool Meets On Schedule Today

OUIMET'S GOLF

—By FRANCIS OUIMET—

Former National Amateur and Open Golf Champion.

Many years ago, when Harry Vardon came to this country, he preached the doctrine of keeping the ball in the air as long as possible because, as he stated, there were no hazards in the air. This idea is a sound one, particularly sound in playing iron shots to the green.

No one appreciates more than myself the value of knowing how to play a pitch-and-run shot, and day in and day out, as an aid to consistent scoring, the safest approach play is the pitch that carries all the way to the green.

In 1930, Bobby Jones won his British amateur title at St. Andrews because he mastered a running shot and played it to perfection, but it must be remembered that the St. Andrew's course at that particular time was so fast and the fairways so hard that a pitch shot was out of the question, but he won, not merely because he was Bobby Jones, but because he quickly adapted himself to a stroke of play that produced the best results. A few weeks later he disregarded the very type of play that brought him success at St. Andrew's and carried on to the U. S. amateur championship through his ability to play high pitches around the flag.

Frances Ouimet

CATER TO PITCH

American courses, as a general thing, and I now speak of the representative ones, are closely trapped around the green and make it necessary for the player to pitch. However, there are many holes where a nice opening is left for a run-up shot. Many golfers feel that because there are no traps to be cleared, a running shot is the one to play, and, consequently, they try this to the exclusion of any other. They seem to forget that the opportunity for a bad kick is greater when a ball lands on the fairway than it is on the putting green, and yet they persist in looking for a roll when it should be an all-carry shot.

A few days ago, I was playing in a game with a chap who had cultivated a very fine run-up shot. On one hole, he drove within 50 yards of the green and attempted his favorite stroke, namely, the pitch and run. Feeling that the green was perhaps a little soft, he hit his pitch very firmly, but the soft green where the ball landed killed any run whatsoever and his shot proved to be a failure. His opponent stepped up and pitched a ball that carried all the way to the green and actually left himself an eight-foot putt for a 3. A few holes later, the player who excelled in the run-up, attempted to play another running shot. Bearing in mind that his ball stopped on soft ground the time previous, he hit another firm shot that looked fine as it left the club, but this time it hit a hard spot and went sailing over the green 30 odd yards.

FACTORS TO CONSIDER

In disgust, he came to me and said:

> "What am I going to do? I came out here today to play nothing but pitch-and-run shots on this course because I always have found this type of shot brought better results. Now, I don't know what to do."

My advice to him was to pitch for the reason that the greens were reasonably slow and would hold a pitch shot fairly well. Furthermore, the ball could be controlled after landing much better in this manner than it could be with a running shot. I further called attention to the condition of the fairway leading up to the greens. In many cases, this was soft and the grass had been permitted to grow long, which made a run-up shot almost an impossibility.

By and large, day in and day out, the best sort of an approach shot to play is a pitch all the way to the hole. I like to remember the advice that J. H. Taylor gave me years ago. At the time he was considered to be a marvel in playing a mashie shot. I asked him what he tried to do when he was faced with a mashie or mashie niblick shot on the green. He said that the whole object was to try to pitch his ball into the hole on the fly. If he hit his ball firmly enough to carry to the pin, he was certain it could not roll far and at least remained on the green. This method of playing pitches made it possible for him to score low figures in almost every competition.

Sport Vignettes

Gene Tunney thinks Max Baer has a good chance against Max Schmeling and Primo Carnera may beat Jack Sharkey in their more or less imminent heavyweight battles. . . . He says Schmeling is hot stuff against short-armed opponents, but Baer isn't short-armed and is tough. . . . Although Sharkey won easily over Carnera in their first bout, Gene points out that he now is two years older and Sharkey then was two years younger. . . . In other words, Sharkey has gone back two years and Primo has come on the same distance.

Lew Raymond can have Seaman Watson, the British champion, if he wants him, for a match on June 15. . . . The local Weisenheimers of boxing are picking Eddie (Kid) Wolfe to give Tracey Cox a tough night of it when they meet in the windup at the North Braddock Bowl next Wednesday night because he's a handy two-fisted guy who can rip away at close quarters, and Cox showed in his recent battle with Tony Herrera at the Arena he's a little worse than terrible when it comes to fighting on the inside.

George Shradle, our enterprising hotel reporter—you can't check into one of our inns without having him know about it—reports that the depression is so bad that the House of David baseball team, enrolled at the Fort Pitt, is going on a half ration of whiskers this year. . . . Good ol' Mike Thompson, the well-known football official and pal of Pop Warner since the latter's Carlisle Indian days, has been inducted into office as burgess of the fair town of Emmitsburg, Md., where St. Mary's College is located. . . . The local golf fans were looking at the Bobby Jones of the professionals when they saw Gene Sarazen in action in his exhibition match at the Field Club this afternoon, and what higher praise could be intoned than that?

FISCHER GOLF VICTOR

EVANSTON, Ill., May 25.—Johnny Fischer, of Michigan, yesterday won his second successive Big Ten golf championship with a score of 301 strokes for 72 holes. Earl Larson, of Minnesota, and Ed Dayton, of Michigan, tied for second with 315 strokes each. Michigan kept the four-man team title, scoring 1,291 to 1,306 for Minnesota.

U.S., ARGENTINE NETTERS MEET

WASHINGTON, May 25.—(AP.)—The United States' Davis Cup quartet, ready to open tennis hostilities with Argentina on the Chevy Chase Club courts today ruled a topheavy favorite to complete its American zone battles without the loss of a match.

Blond Wilmer Allison, American captain, was ready to take the courts in the second singles match against Hector Cattaruzza, playing his first Davis Cup tennis in the North American zone.

EVANS ENTERS RACE

Larry Evans, of Steubenville, who finished in the money 14 times in 21 starts last year, has entered the 100-mile automobile race to be held at the Arden Downs track on Memorial Day. Gummy Tramieson, one of the entrants in the race, also will take part in the head-on collision, an added attraction.

Some time ago we modestly asserted in an advertisement that a Plus-Six Suit of our acquaintance had been cleaned twelve times to our certain knowledge. And it still looked like new. In came a man next day proudly displaying his pet Plus-Six Suit that he said had been cleaned forty-three times! Said we could count the cleaner's stamps ourselves. We did count twenty-some and quit. That Suit had taken some punishment—but it still showed its sturdy quality, its honest tailoring. You've got to respect a Suit with that kind of stuff in it!

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENT IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP.)—Financial markets paused today, after the brisk upturn of the past two sessions, which carried industrial and rail stocks to the highest average levels since November of 1931.

Wheat was reactionary in the early trading, losing more than a cent, which appeared to have a dampening effect upon shares, but cotton held up fairly well. Stocks rallied for a time in the morning under leadership of the rails, then became unsettled. Trading continued in substantial volume.

The semi-annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute brought much hopeful comment from steel executives, in contrast to the gloomy session a year ago. Several executives found the upturn in their business distinctly encouraging, in view of the fact that railroads and construction had contributed so little to it. There was still some complaint over the prices which steel products are bringing, despite the recent stiffening of quotations.

The action of the governing committee of the stock exchange in ordering removal from listing of Allied Chemical by August 23, if the company still refuses by that time to make available such information to its stockholders as the committee on the stock list deems adequate, attracted wide attention in Wall street. While no statement was forthcoming from the company's executives, it was pointed out in some quarters that setting the date as far ahead as August 23 indicated that there was still hope of an agreement.

Market analysts who use charts were encouraged by yesterday's action of the rails in penetrating the upper resistance level at which last September's advance was checked, thus "confirming" the similar action by the industrials last week. As measured by averages, both groups have now reached the highest levels since November, 1931. Utilities have lagged, however, failing to top the price of only last January.

THREATEN BAN ON ALLIED

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP.)—The governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange voted yesterday to strike from the list, on August 23, the common and preferred shares of the Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation, unless, in the meantime, the company complies with a ruling ordering it to furnish stockholders and the exchange more informative financial statements.

Correspondence between the exchange's committee on stock list and the company, inaugurated in March, 1932, with the exchange's first formal request for more informative statements, was carried on until early this year.

A few weeks ago the exchange publicly announced its inability to gain its end through the medium of letters and requested officials of the company to appear before its board of governors for a hearing.

This step was interpreted in some quarters as a last opportunity for the company to comply partially or fully with the exchange's demand under pain of possible removal of the company's stock from the exchange list.

Two postponements were granted the company for filing its answer, and recent gossip in Wall street said that the company was understood to be ready to bow to the exchange's ultimatium.

GRAIN VALUES FALL BACK

It was pointed out by some trade authorities that prices were near to recent peaks, and that sustained speculative purchasing at this stage was questionable. Opening ½ to 1 cent down, wheat afterward sagged further. Corn started ¼ to ⅞ cent lower, and continued to recede.

Wheat and corn both fell more than 1½ cents a bushel before developing power to rally.

Bears gave stress also to assertions that, although the objective of Washington agricultural administrators was 92 cents for wheat from the farm, the officials did not expect to accomplish this result at once. Special notice among corn traders was taken of reports that 50 per cent of Eastern Iowa planting would be completed by Saturday night, if the weather remained good. Oats followed corn.

LOCAL MARKET MOVEMENTS NARROW

Prices moved over a narrow range on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today as the New York market ran into occasional profit taking and nervous selling. Dealings on the board here were in fairly large volume with a broad list of stocks appearing in the list. Business was well distributed throughout the various groups. Brewings were active. Pittsburgh Brewing preferred came to a halt in its sensational upturn of the past several days. Most of the lower priced brewings were firm with the exception of Renner, which fell back in the early dealings under the weight of moderate offerings.

Heavy industrials were generally narrow. Blaw Knox held around the best levels of the recent movement, while Armstrong Cork yielded slightly. Koppers fell back another point. Pittsburgh Forgings was firm.

COTTON PRICES RULE LOWER

NEW YORK, May 25.—Cotton futures opened barely steady, 4-7 lower on reports of good rains in Texas and under renewed liquidation. July, 8.59; October, 8.83; December, 8.96; January, 9.01; March, 9.20.

At the end of the first half hour, July was ruling around 8.57 and December 8.93, or 4 to 9 points net lower.

After showing net losses of about 8 to 12 points under the early pressure, with July declining to 8.51 and December to 8.90, prices rallied on a renewal of trade and commission house buying, combined with covering. The early losses were just about recovered, and some months sold a point or two net higher, but the bulges met more selling on favorable weather and crop news and setbacks followed. At midday July was ruling around 8.56 and December 8.97, with active months generally showing net losses of some 4 to 8 points.

CHASE SETS UP TAX RESERVE

NEW YORK, May 25.—(AP.)—The Chase National Bank announced a reduction of its surplus from $100,000,000 to $50,000,000, one reason for which was to provide for writing off or covering by reserves of obligations of the Fox Film Corporation and the General Theaters Equipment Corporation.

The General Theaters Equipment Corporation is in receivership. A few months ago action by a stockholder calling upon Fox Film to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed was withdrawn. Last March, W. W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank, and several others, retired as directors of Fox Film.

The statement issued by the bank indicated that the action taken was regarded as extremely conservative, and that "substantial recoveries" on the obligations may save the use of all of the reserves set up. No details as to the obligations of General Theaters and Fox were given, other than the statement that after write-downs they now approximate $15,000,000.

Star Morgan Witness Sure To Be Lamont

By B. C. FORBES

THOMAS W. LAMONT probably will supply the Senatorial investigators with more information about J. P. Morgan & Co.'s affairs than any other partner.

B. C. Forbes

He is the most active, the most influential of the senior partners. Mr. Morgan leans very heavily on his judgment. No vitally important decision is made until Lamont passes on it. He is constantly consulted by other partners.

At one time his friends and associates feared that he would suffer the same fate as a tragic number of other principal Morgan associates: total breakdown and premature death. But of late years Lamont has given thought to his health. He has learned to relax, to play, to enjoy vacations. Like J. P., Lamont has "softened" with advancing years—he used to be regarded as hard-boiled. He is now more human, more humane, more sympathetic, more conciliatory, more diplomatic.

Lamont has taken the place formerly occupied by the late H. P. Davison, who was, in my opinion, the ablest American banker produced this century. Harry Davison tried and tried and tried to get "Jack" Morgan to become more democratic towards the public. Davison himself was essentially democratic, warm-hearted, friendly, genial. Oftener than once he lamented to me that "Jack" wouldn't unbend to the public.

I had a "run-in" with Morgan more than twenty years ago. (I took early occasion to even up the score.) Harry Davison sought to bring about a rapprochement, but, although I was previously on friendly terms with Morgan, we haven't exchanged a word since. Davison tried to convince Morgan that he was entirely wrong, but in those days "J. P." was extremely bull-headed, aloof, self-sufficient.

That age has mellowed him was demonstrated by his affability at the opening of the Senatorial quiz this week. He even graciously posed for newspaper photographers, something he would have scorned to do in the past. Doubtless he was well coached by his more diplomatic, more democratic associates.

THOSE OF us who have been bewailing shrinkage of our assets and who have been inclined to call ourselves all kinds of fools, should derive some consolation from the fact that even the mighty house of Morgan has suffered more than a 50 per cent shrinkage in its assets.

The fact is, of course, that anybody who owned securities or property or assets of any other kind whatsoever (apart from U. S. government bonds) has become worth much less since the all-embracing deflation set in. Nobody, nothing has escaped.

So, don't let us be too hard on ourselves, don't let us conclude that we are less capable than we once were, that we must be boobs.

ANOTHER BIG, booming day in Wall street.

Who have been the principal buyers of stocks?

One stock exchange firm tells me that, whereas its loans well exceeded $200,000,000 in 1929, buying on margin has been so moderate that it hasn't had to borrow a dollar, its own capital being sufficient to pay outright for all stocks bought on margin by customers.

This same house gave me one example of recent buying; it consisted of a carefully-selected list of issues, mostly industrials, which footed up to three-quarters of a million dollars—and the customer handed over a check for the total amount.

If the tide has permanently turned, if we have said good-bye to rock-bottom prices for commodities and raw materials, if employment is permanently broadening, even the spectacular rebound already registered by stocks and speculative bonds is likely to prove relatively mild.

The majority of shares are still selling minus dividends—and the paying of dividends is normal in normal times.

Allied Chemical Threat Disturbs Entire Stock List

Heavy selling in Allied Chemical, which brought a wide open break of some 5 points in that stock in the first few minutes, was partially accountable for the broad reaction which swept the general market down for moderate losses before the end of the first hour. The break in Allied resulted from selling influenced by the news of the decision of the stock exchange governors to "strike the stock from its trading list on August 23 next unless the corporation shall previously have acquiesed to the demand of the institution that its shareholders be provided with more adequate information on its condition.

The implied disinclination of Allied Chemical to comply with the stock exchange demands proved an unpleasant surprise to the rank and file in the financial community. Unofficial conjecture and recent strength in the stock had been broadly interpreted as indicating that the major differences had been ironed out and that the company had backed down on its previous stand. The extension of time granted was a bit puzzling inasmuch as stock exchange efforts have already extended over a three-year period. But it was assumed that the latest grant was mide in order to provide stockholders with sufficient time in which to decide upon their course of action while the broad market provided by the exchange remains open to them.

The Union Pacific's decision to use aluminum in its new high-speed train will give a real impetus to the general use of the metal in railroad equipment construction and afford a full test of its worth. Really general use of aluminum in railroad equipment and trucks would expand the deman for the metal enormously. It is estimated, for instance, that if only 500 pounds of aluminum were used in each freight and passenger car on the railroads, a total of 1,000,000,000 pounds would be required. Actual production of aluminum, both primary and secondary, amounted to about 353,000,000 pounds in 1929. Output for 1932 is estimated at 144,000,000 pounds.

The action of leading distillery company stocks, particularly in the afternoon, suggested that the floating supply of those issues had been whittled down substantially in the last few months. Led by national distiller, the alcohol issues as a group soared. United States Industrial Alcohol was a sensational feature with a five point rise which carried it into new high ground. Other issues in the group pushed ahead proportionately.

Industry Disregards Seasonal Factors During Week

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

INDUSTRY IS DISREGARDING seasonal precedents. Expansion in steel mill operation is continuing in spite of the fact that production ordinarily takes a downward turn at this time of year.

Steel mill executives who, a few weeks ago, expected a pronounced seasonal recession, are beginning to change their minds. The expansion in steel orders shows no sign of abatement. This is leading to the belief that the summer recession in activity may be smaller than usual.

While automobile producers accounted for a large share of the gains in steel tonnage a month ago, the improvement more recently has spread to a wide range of steel consuming industries so that rolling mill activity no longer is depending upon any one or two types of consumers.

* * *

Automobile Trade Continues to Gain

THE AUTOMOBILE industry usually passes its peak period in sales early in May and from that time on ordinarily curtails operations. This year, however, expansion is continuing and increases in production schedules still are being made. May automobile sales of passenger cars are expected to total 131 000 units. This would represent an increase of about 15 per cent over May of last year.

An estimate for the first six months in 1933 places the total production of cars and trucks at 950,000 units which would compare with 911,000 units in the corresponding period of last year and with an average output of about 2,200,000 units in the first half of the past six years.

The low rate of automobile output during the depression period has built up a large back log of replacement business for the motor car builders. Cars which ordinarily would have been sent to the junk yard a year or two ago are still in service. Their replacement is awaiting only a restoration in public buying power and reasonable confidence in the future. It is quite within the realm of possibility that this replacement business will give the auto industry the greatest volume in its history once general business is definitely established on an upward trend.

Building of Rails May Be Retarded

TWO OF THE leading steel consuming industries are likely to be slow in recovering. These are building and rails.

While the revival undoubtedly will bring some structural tonnage to the steel industry, it is difficult to see how any great volume of demand would be developed for construction work until the existing surplus of practically all kinds of structures is put in use.

The railroads have been neglecting maintenance work for several years. Most systems could advantageously replace a large share of their equipment, but difficulties in financing their purchases are likely to provide a major obstacle.

BULL TRADERS KEEP WORD BY RAIL BOOST

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Well, the bulls did what they said they would, and we will have to hand it to them. They put the rail stocks through that "upper resistance level" with a bang. According to widely accepted market theory, this should indicate that a broad upward trend will prevail for quite a while. It "confirms" the rise in the industrial stocks.

The big factor in this performance is the indication that the inflationary program has begun to function. Although this big rise began in anticipation of inflation, no one has been quite sure, for there have been many obstacles in the way to effect inflation.

The development of bullish sentiment which has attended the recovery in stock prices, however, has made inflation easier; and now comes the announcement that the Federal Reserve has begun "open market operations."

SYMPATHY SEEN

It is significant that Washington gave advance notice of this on Monday. One may conclude that so far Washington is sufficiently in sympathy with the market move to have stepped in and started something at exactly the time when a sharp reaction was threatening.

Actually the purchase of only $25,000,000 of government bonds was announced, but in the present state of sentiment that was enough to give the "go ahead." It will be taken to mean that the banks can count on being given increased reserves as speculation draws on their credit.

Of course similar action last year was quite futile. Now, however, the banks cannot lose gold, as that is being hoarded by the government, and there is little chance of a popular hoarding of money, as no one can get any that is worth hoarding. Thus the conditions are more favorable to credit inflation.

STABILIZING MOVE

At the same time a program of "currency stabilization" is apparently getting under way. As the administration proceeds to force domestic prices up, it is going to try to keep the dollar down in foreign exchange and to prevent wild fluctuations in the rate of exchange.

Europe quickly sensed this, and sold dollars. At home, there was another big up-rush in stocks. This push much resembled the earlier moves, which came in two-day surges, with numerous "gaps" at the opening.

This time, however, is notable as having brought many stocks through the highs of last September, including the rail stock averages. For two weeks, the market has "absorbed" a great deal of selling. Finally, the "leaders" were pushed through. Then enough rails were run up to put the laggard rail average through (with the help of a good deal of short covering).

There were clear signs of distribution again yesterday.

EMSWORTH NET TEAM JOINS LOCAL LOOP

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

At just about the moment that all seemed set for start of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League campaign and local net officials had reconciled themselves to the idea of a seven-team Second Division to the loop, along came Eddie Grant from out North Boroughs way yesterday with definite proposal to enter an Emsworth Tennis Club squad in the lower sector of the circuit.

A hasty telephone vote of P. T. A. executive committee members was promptly taken with result that the Grant coterie was unanimously awarded the secondary berth.

The Emsworth contingent includes on its roster, in addition to Grant, such performers as Granville Beitel, Mack McCormick, Don Beitel, and several others of similar caliber.

Meanwhile P. T. A. authorities are considering advisability of forming a third inter-club wheel to care for outfits that, though tardy in organizing because of the uncertain weather, may desire to get into action now that spring seems to have arrived to stay.

Grant Siverd's Dukes copped a rain-abbreviated contest from Waynesburg College here yesterday. The Bluffites were leading, 3-2, when deluge drenched the Hill asphalt and all bets were adjudged off for the day.

Savage Paradise

AUDACIOUS GIRL REVEALS SECRETS OF SOUTHERN SEAS

CHAPTER IX.

I came upon Mrs. Jessaby gathering flowers from her garden—a garden of marigold, gentians and yellow poppies that was like a breath of England. It must have taken infinite patience and labor to nurture that garden in Rabaul. As she stood up to greet me I could see pleasure in her eyes because I had come.

We turned to the thatched house. Bougainvillea rioted over it, an avalanche of purple flowers; steps led to a tiny porch; it looked a crazy little fairytale house on stilts. Inside, there were two small rooms, with rough limbung floors; detached, at the rear, were house-cook and house-washwash. A house little better than a native's, but she had made it a home. A couple of comfortable wicker chairs, a table, a truly beautiful walnut chest (relic of some German homestead), a table, a bookshelf with books in three languages, these and she had done the trick.

A Buka boy, black as coal, in an immaculate, bordered lap-lap, served tea and delicious little sandwiches and cakes out under an arbor of bougainvillea.

CONTENT WITH LIFE

Mrs. Jessaby and I talked of many things, inconsequentialities for the most part, but not of herself. If I am any judge, hers is a quick and trained intellect that could hold its own anywhere. Here was a great woman wasted on a little Pacific outpost. And she appeared altogether serene, quite content with life. There was no trace of wisfulness about her.

It came sunset time. The trade breeze returned to the island. Outrigger canoes, with a cargo of natives and a great oval wicker fishing trap, moved silently, smoothly down the coast. The soft rose light gradually enveloped us like a mantle. A cocoanut dropped from a tall palm behind us, starting a flying fox. We rose, myself to go. As we looked out over the harbor, the serene reflection of the volcano seemed to reach across the lagoon to lay a friendly hand on this solitary place.

Well, the husky English voice had charmed me once again. But why had this woman deliberately chosen to live in this tiny, relentless place?

EFFECTUAL RECRUITING

The Mandated Territory has produced two great recruiters. Their careers are too good to be hidden in the annals of obscure atolls of the South Pacific. A recruiter, be it known, is an agent who "signs on" natives for a period of labor, chiefly for plantations. Of yore he was called "blackbirder." A recruiter's life is a hard one—months of weary pushing through bush and jungle into the hinterland villages, constant danger from disease, injury and hostile natives. But it is a lucrative profession, for planters are glad to pay £12 ($60) a head for the savages; while carriers for the gold fields bring £20 a head.

Both men I have in mind are still living, though already they are legends. One is no longer in the islands, for he sank very low in the human scale and the government paid his way "down south." They are Bill Towers and Bluey Errin. In the Australian territory every man with red hair is dubbed "Bluey."

Bill Towers I have seen. It was one evening at the old German hotel at Kokopo outside of Rabaul, where automobile parties generally end up to make whoopee. Towers was informally clad in striped pajamas, and was in a noisily mellow state. Every one is tolerant of his eccentricities, which are many, partly because of his remarkable career, partly because of his good humor.

Back in the days before the war, in Austrilia, Towers used to be a juggling clown in a circus. He is also a remarkable ventriloquist.

His means of recruiting have been more effective than ethical. His pulling of a shilling or an egg out of a boy's wool; his explaining to the natives that they would be able to dip holes in the ground to plant cocoanuts if they followed him, and digging a hole under their very eyes and uncovering in it a shilling or some desirable bauble; his ability to pull a piglet out of his Stetson before their wide gaze; the ease with which he removed his apparently firm teeth, such wonders as these play upon primitive fear and respect.

NATIVES IMPRESSED

Towers used to carry a ventriloquist's dummy with him on recruiting expeditions. He would assemble the village and, holding the dummy on his knees, converse with it, an interpreter translating to the open-mouthed savages. The conversation would embrace questions regarding the delights of "signing on" with the "white-fella-mastah," and the dummy would expound, in a high-pitched voice and in no uncertain language, the benefits of life on a plantation. To the natives the dummy was a tambaran, or spirit, and the recruiter no less than deity.

There is a famous story about how Towers won a bet of £50 from a missionary. There is warfare between the missioners and the planters. The missionaries want the souls of the natives; the planters—hence the recruiters—want their bodies to do the work that must be done if the white man is to survive in New Guinea. The missionaries discourage the boys from signing on as recruits. Bill Towers one day bet a prominent missionary that he could recruit natives from off the very mission grounds. The father poured himself out another beer and bet him he couldn't. The mission influence among his converts was too strong to be demoralized.

Towers waited several months until the missioner's vigilance was somewhat relaxed. Then one lazy day an outrigged canoe pulled up along the shore of the mission plantation, and a lank black-coated figure wearing false whiskers and an inverted collar, and with a Bible in his hand, got out. He sat down under a tree, opened his book, and began reading aloud in pidgin, as if he were merely reading to himself. This attracted various kanakas who assumed that he was a missioner. A crowd gathered but he seemed not to notice it at all. Into the Scripture reading, however, he began weaving elaborations to the effect that Jesus had immediate need of boys to work for him, and that rewards awaited those who would follow him and "make paper."

ANOTHER RECRUITER

After sufficiently appealing to their primitive emotions, Towers took stock of his 50-odd recruits. He conducted them to the district officer and sent for the self-confident missionary to view his triumph. The father came. Exactly what happened I don't know, but Towers released his recruits and collected his bet. He and the father had another drink together. Towers has, for the present at any rate, turned to gold prospecting in Dutch New Guinea.

Bluey Errin was also a prodigious blackbirder. His hair was the color of carrots. No one seems to know what his Christian name was, or what his origin. Some say he was formerly a bus driver "down south." But he was one of the best recruiters the Mandated Territory ever knew. He recruited for the official Expropriation Board after Australia took over the German South Pacific colonies.

His favorite recruiting costume was famous. It was originally an old claw-hammer dress suit, including a high hat. When the outfit needed replacement he commissioned a Chinese tailor in Rabaul to copy it in white calico, tail-coat and all bound with red, and with large red buttons and with red stripes down the trousers legs. Across the back of the coat, in red braid, was the legend EXPRO BOARD. A huge top-hat, in the manner of Uncle Sam's was covered with white calico, and from its crown floated many colored streamers. It is easy to imagine the effect of this apparition on unsuspecting natives.

COURAGE OF GAMBLER

Bluey had many tricks in his bag. Once he went into a village that had come under mission influence and prayed there for two solid hours, kneeling before a grave, performing strange rites and sprinkling the ground lavishly with a heavy-smelling trade scent beloved in New Guinea. So impressive were his actions that the natives thought he was a man for them to follow, and a number of them did follow him. You are entitled to laugh only if you have never fallen for a stuffed shirt.

Like most of the whites in far-lying countries, Bluey had the courage of the true gambler. He entered a jungle village once and found that the wife of the luluai, or chief, was about to have a baby. The luluai particularly wanted a son; indeed, on no account did he want another girl baby. Bluey made such an impression with his assurances that he could guarantee the birth of a boy baby if the chief would give him a certain number of strong recruits that the luluai believed him and handed over a dozen of the best boys of the village.

The woman's time was near. So Bluey made a getaway with his recruits. A savage chief is no man to fool around with if you have betrayed his confidence. However, curiousity was too strong for the recruiter, and he stationed some of his carriers to find out what the mary should be delivered of. She gave birth that night to a son, and the red-headed recruiter, in ridiculous calico suit and streamer-bedecked hat, returned to the village in triumph. The luluai had a singsing in his honor, and pressed upon him some more recruits.

CONSTELLATIONS AROUND THE POLE STAR (Science)

The greatest concentration of stars is along a broad band called the "Milky Way" or "Galaxy." Nearer stars than those in the "Milky Way" are roughly arranged in groups called constellations. The brightest star is "Sirius" in the constellation of the Great Dog (Canis Major). The Pole Star is of the second magnitude. Stars beyond the sixth magniture cannot be seen by the unaided eye. BELL'S ORIGINAL TELEPHONE (1876)

Alexander Graham Bell (1847-1922) invented the telephone, a device whereby sound waves may be reproduced at distant points. It consisted of a transmitter and a similar receiver connected by wires. Sounds against the diaphragm D (a varnished thin iron-disk in a rubber case) causes vibration before the permanent magnet, S, changing its flux. This induces in the coil around the magnet a current that flows to the receiver coil and influences the flux of its magnet, causing in D' vibrations similar to the original ones and resulting in the reproduction of the original sounds. (Smith: Industrial Electricity).

MODERN TELEPHONE RECEIVER (Science)

The essential parts are a permanent horseshoe magnet with soft iron pole pieces surrounded by coils of fine insulated wire and an iron diaphragm (all inclosed in a hard rubber casing). The coils are in series with each other and with the line. As the line current fluctuates, the attraction between magnet and diaphragm varies accordingly, causing the latter to reproduce the vibrations of the microphone diaphragm of the sending station. (Smith: Industrial Electricity).

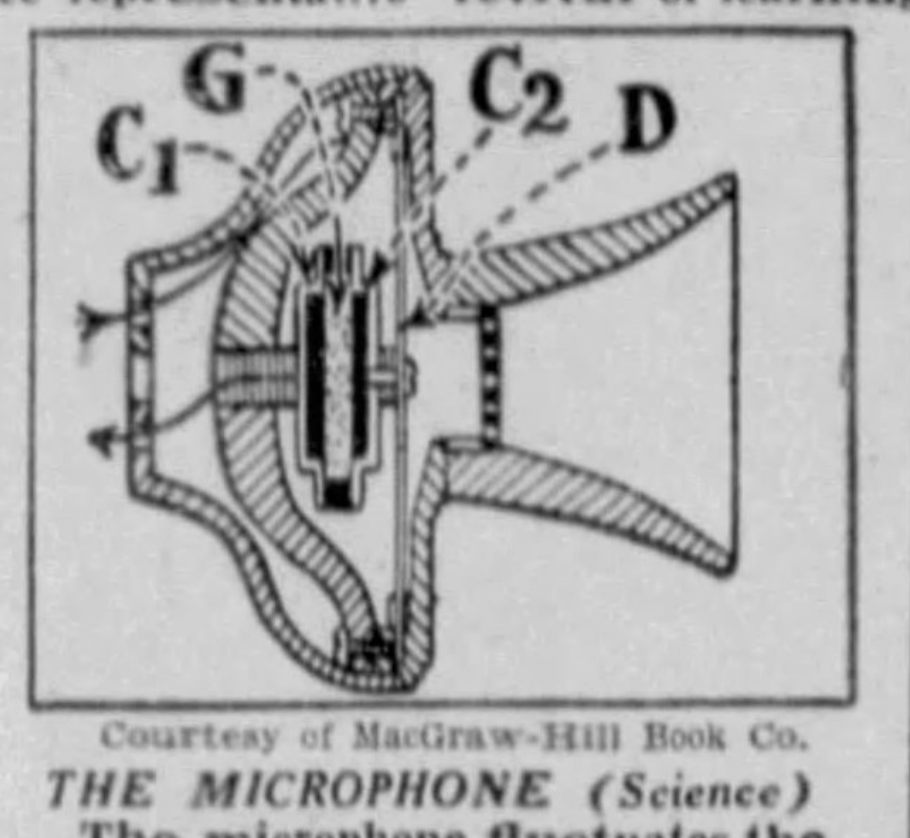
PRINCIPLE OF MODERN TELEPHONE

Bell used the energy of the sound waves (very small) to generate current for transmission, but the current was insufficient for greater distances. The modern telephone uses the energy of electric batteries, B1, B2, for that purpose and the sound waves only regulate the energy output of the batteries by changing the resistance of the primary circuits, P1, P2. This is accomplished by the microphones, T1, T2, as explained at right. The secondary coil, S1, forms a step-up transformer with the coil of primary circuit P1 (similarly S2 with P2), so that high voltage current will flow in the long connecting lines and reduce the losses of transmission. The receivers, R1, R2, are in principle the same as Bell's. In cities, where many telephones are in operation, a large storage battery or a generator at a central station supplies all the transmitters with primary current. On isolated lines local batteries are used. (Smith: Industrial Electricity).



Courtesy of MacGraw-Hill Book Co.

THE MICROPHONE (Science)

The microphone fluctuates the primary current according to sound waves. A carbon electrode, C1, is rigidly attached to the frame of the microphone and another electrode, C2, to the diaphragm, D. Between the electrodes the space is filled with granular carbon G. Sound waves vibrate D and with it C2 compressing or loosening the carbon granules, which are in series in the primary circuit, decreasing or increasing its resistance. The result will be an increased or decreased intensity of the primary and also of the secondary current. (Smith: Industrial Electricity).

THE NITROGEN CYCLE (Chemistry)

Nitrogen, along with carbon and hydrogen, is one of the characteristic elements of living matter. It enters into the composition of the proteins, which are fundamental compounds of all protoplasm, and also forms a great part of the atmosphere as free gas. This diagram traces its history through nature. (Burrell: Chemistry).

BAKING POWDER AND INGREDIENTS

Baking powders are used to "raise" dough by liberating CO_2 when mixed with water. To make a baking powder at home, mix 8 ounces of cream of tartar with from 1 (for quick action) to 3 ounces (for slower action) of cornstarch, shake well and add 4 ounces of baking soda. The reaction in the dough: $HKH_4C_4O_6 + NaHCO_3 = KNaH_4C_4O_6$ (Rochelle salt) $+ CO_2 + H_2O$. Rochelle salt is a laxative and not so objectionable as the residue of alum baking powders (potash —, soda — or ammonia-alum). The residue phosphate baking powder is less objectionable. (Snyder: Human Foods). (Science).

Business Has Picked Up

The fashionable summer girl will be shy, 16 and slender. That's the way it reads in the catalog.

Clothes, cosmetics and coiffures will all help in the general ensemble. But the real answer is those tishy little hats the ladies are wearing.

You may well ask what The Bug knows about style and the finer things of life. But a lot of us guys have become fashion experts since some of the department stores started selling beer.

He measures you for six bottles of Milwaukee fabric and the first thing you know the owner of the store has placed you in temporary charge while he runs out for the police.

Naturally, the saleslady sets up the stepladders on the house and you buy an encyclopedia and a lawn mower for a total stranger.

The mercantile experts tell us that department store beer has improved buying all over the store.

Why, some of the boys even buy the ladies' hats we were talking about and wear them home.

Trade has boomed. The toughest customers now walk out smiling and happy wearing two left shoes and carrying mail order bungalows under their arms. They don't have to deliver a thing. The boys are strong enough to carry everything themselves.

When we advocated temperance beer we didn't realize the effects would be so beneficial and far fluing. We knew it would affect business. But we didn't imagine the boys would start out for some summer neckties and wind up rowing a bath tub down Fifth avenue.

The Supine Surrender of American Principles at Geneva

A RATHER bad day for America, fellow citizens!

We thought the Washington disarmament conference, when Secretary of State Hughes without offset or recompense sank the newest and finest ships in the American Navy, marked the limit of injury to the United States which could be self-inflicted.

It was nothing, however, compared to the amazing surrender at Geneva of our country's strength and security made in the name of the American people by a spokesman who no more speaks their wishes, convictions or purposes than the man in the moon.

The first official act of George Washington, upon inauguration as the first President of the United States, was the declaration of America's neutrality in the wars then convulsing Europe.

In the century and a half of the nation's life, the policy of neutrality in conflicts to which we were not a party has protected us from the ravages of recurring wars, exempted us from the passions engendered by them and assured our peaceful growth and development as a nation.

ON MONDAY at Geneva this wise and beneficent principle of American policy was tossed to the winds.

To relinquish this natural, and, to a maritime power such as the United States, essential right will be regarded by the American people as the most abject of surrenders. On more than one occasion in the past we have gone to war in defense of this right. And we will go again if need be. Its surrender will never be tolerated or condoned.

The oft-repeated refusal of the United States to bind itself in a consultative pact with Europe and thus make itself a party and a judge in the innumerable, incessant and clouded controversies of that feud-infested continent, was forgotten in a moment.

Without mandate from the people, without even their knowledge, without warning to Congress and without an opportunity afforded either the Senate or House to speak, it is stated on behalf of the unsuspecting United States that "we are willing to consult the other states in case of a threat of peace."

Like children playing with firearms, the improvised statesmanship of the hour ignores the lessons of our history, rejects the warnings of experience, defies the restraints of the Constitution and whirls us to the brink of untold disaster.

SHOULD WAR break out, and sober opinion regards war under the surcharged conditions now prevailing in the world as an almost certain eventuality, we have involved ourselves in that most difficult and dangerous of undertakings—the designation of the aggressor.

What happens to us upon such designation is left in apparent obscurity, but it is only apparent. What we say is that we will "refrain" from any action tending to defeat the collective efforts of the nations who join with us in such designation.

But the consequences to us of taking part in so dangerous an operation are not limited by our declarations of intention. Such a designation would be deeply resented by the nation so designated and would certainly be regarded as an act of war, particularly if our abstention from the assertion of neutral rights were interpreted as giving support to such designation by an overt act of hostility. This would be entirely reasonable, as the departure from the conduct of a neutral could not fail to be regarded as the conduct of a belligerent. We should be charged, and rightly, with having cast the weight of our attitude against a nation from whom we had received neither provocation nor injury.

In addition to these objections to the tenor and substance of the Geneva statement of America's altered policy, there hangs over it a sickening insincerity of interpretation.

IT IS evidently the purpose of the administration to convince France and Germany of our intention to guarantee their mutual peace and security by concrete and definite collaboration and support.

Although we invite this interpretation in Europe, it is not at all the conclusion which we ask our own people to draw.

While the London Times refers to the Democratic administration as proposing to change the traditional attitude of the United States toward the whole question of neutrality and freedom of the seas, Secretary Hull on the other hand regards the Geneva statement as reserving to the United States government full liberty of judgment and action.

It is open to question, who are the more deceived,—the people of Europe or the people of the United States.

We can say this, however,—the people of the United States will not long be deceived.

They are a hard-headed people. They know how to effectuate their will and how on occasion to manifest their resentment if convinced that American principles have been betrayed or American interests compromised.

They are children of the day, not of the night, nor of the darkness. They watch and are sober.

They do not propose that sudden destruction shall come upon them, as a thief in the night.

Annexation Not Favored

The Ideal Plan for a Greater Pittsburgh Is to Take in the Whole County.

The Pittsburgh Board of Education has given a cool reception to the proposal that Mifflin Township be annexed to the city.

The board has not been favorable to annexation proposals lately, because the establishment of schools of the city standard in contiguous areas would necessitate expenditures in excess of the tax receipts from those areas.

This also holds true of police and fire protection and other municipal services that would have to be furnished. In extending the municipal boundaries to take in boroughs and townships desirous of annexation Pittsburgh might assume a financial burden.

Nevertheless a Greater Pittsburgh is desirable.

The ideal plan is to take in the whole county under the provisions of the constitutional amendment to be voted on next autumn.

It is none too early to launch an organized campaign on behalf of the amendment. It comes before all the citizens of Pennsylvania, and something should be done to acquaint those in other parts of the state with its significance. Otherwise, through suspicion or ignorance, they may vote against it, as almost half of them did several years ago when a similar measure was up.

A Pointer From Detroit

Pittsburgh May Profit from the Michigan City's Experience With Its Subway Plan.

The Michigan city has included an underground railway with 20.6 miles of double-track line in a $131,700,000 public works program. The subway is to cost $87,000,000, and it is proposed to finance it in part with funds to be obtained from the federal government. Representatives of Detroit have already been to see President Roosevelt and Secretary of Commerce Harry Ickes in regard to the plan.

This is of considerable local interest because we also have a subway plan, submitted to Council and the Mayor on Monday by the City Transit Commission. Our subway is to be 6.2 miles long, and will cost in its entirety $21,000,000, though it may be built in independent sections to cost between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 each.

The Detroit engineers estimate that their subway will give employment to 9,000 men on a 30-hour week basis for a period of four years, and that 16,000 additional men will be indirectly employed in the supply, manufacture and transportation of materials.

While no estimate of the number of men who would be employed on the Pittsburgh job has been offered, it is obvious that if the Detroit estimate is accurate thousands could be given work on the local project.

The more the subway proposal is studied the more desirable and the more feasible it appears.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I talked to a man behind bars. His eyes were angry, desperate. But they were bewildered, too. He looked at the bars as if he couldn't believe they were there. You could see it was still a bad dream to him—a bad dream he couldn't understand, or explain.

He tried for a while, then gave it up. At last he simply said: "I didn't mean to get like this."

It was perfectly plain that he told the truth. He was 33 years old. He had led an idle, irresponsible life, culminating in sudden murder; but I was as sure as he was that he never, for an instant, "meant to get like this."

Did YOU mean to get like this?

Did YOU ever plan to be the man or the woman that you are today?

Of course you didn't!

Remember those glowing dreams you had at seventeen? Such brave and beautiful young dreams they were—weren't they?

How sweet, how far away, that bright young dreaming! How different, how tragically different, the reality!

But you didn't mean that the reality should be different, did you?

Never once did you plan to make all those shabby compromises, or commit those secret betrayals.

And yet, here you sit today, tears in your eyes and a pain turning like a knife in your heart, as you think of your lost paradise and wonder how you ever strayed from it.

So you're not so different from the man behind the bars, after all, are you, partner?

Yet here we are, staring at the strangeness of our alien selves, as that poor murderer stared at his bars; wondering how we got like this. Surely we never planned it.

And there's the whole sad secret

WE DIDN'T PLAN TO BE BAD.

BUT NEITHER DID WE PLAN TO BE GOOD.

WE HAD SUCH FINE INTENTIONS.

WE DIDN'T KNOW THAT SIMPLY BEING DECENT IS A TWO-FISTED, FIGHTING JOB—AND THAT DREAMING AND DRIFTING NEVER LAND YOU ANYWHERE EXCEPT IN THE STAGNANT SHALLOWS.

And so, unwittingly, our lives went all askew.

But we took the easiest way—

And here we are today!

No use crying over spilt milk, of course. But perhaps even now, late as it is, we can be the thing we want to be—if we know how it is that we "get like this."

Text for Today And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.—1. Thessalonians, v: 23.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 25.—An auto breakdown and sudden shower sent us scurrying to the porch of one of those allalike box cottages on the fringe of a Long Island suburb. While we waited a coupe drove up and a rather abashed couple streaked across the lawn. They occupied the house and asked us in.

There was a newness and varnish smell about the oak suite of the living room. His suit, too, was Sundayfied and her hat had the appearance of being made at home. Slowly it dawned they were newlyweds. Indeed they had just come from a parson's to their outfitted nest now cluttered with interlopers.

Each had that delightful timidity of the very young. He tried to appear nonchalant while she seemed lost in illimitable wonder of her groom. They showed us their new radio, their frisky fox terrier puppy and he told us something of his invention—he was not going to be always tied to an office.

On a turn up the cellar steps from his carpenter shop I glanced back and he was snatching a quick kiss. Skies cleared and they stood waving on the boundary of their paradise, gazing arm in arm into the dusk and their Future! All of us long marrieds tried to say something but none could.

Our chauffeur, John De Carlo, is something of a romanticist. Born and reared amid the beetling gibraltars of the metropolis, he has a flair for the beauty of open spaces. He is a glutton for sunsets, imprisoning their imagery in some spare locker of his brain. If at twilight he suddenly veers through a forgotten street, we know he is on his way to reveal some newly discovered sunset. Last evening, after a quick turn, we found ourselves on an upland shoot near Sixty-third boulevard in Corona. The sky was flushing with dying colors, red, russet to orange. All the spires of New York seemed penduluming in the bonfire. "Ain't that the malarky?" inquired John.

* * *

Another sunset view John has taught us to love is seen from the Speedway after passing the Polo Grounds along the Harlem River. Here leaping in surprising curves are the sheer spans of two enormous bridges. The sun on the water throws the bridges into odd bas-relief with a lavender haze powdering the groved slopes of either side. It is another miracle in Nature's generous handouts.

Bat Masterson's favorite eating place, Beefsteak Charlie's, scooped between narrow walls, a hop-skip off Broadway, carries on. The profusion of trotters and running horses framed along its length indicate the race track clientele. Sporty men with those ladies who yell unashamed in grand stands make up most of the patronage. I once saw Earl Sande there and in other days its enormous specialty combination salad used to attract Al Smith and Alfred Lewis.

It has doubtless been commented upon, but it strikes me the best dressed ladies with the most imperial manners in New York are not of aristocratic circles or stage. They are, instead, buyers for large department stores. They have a refined hauteur and self assurance no other class of professional women obtain. One today was a combination of Maxine Elliott, Queen Mary and the Countess Sourpuss.

I called on this buyer in interest of a deserving friend. After mumbling something while she checked some figures she said pertly without looking up: "Speak up!" In the confusion I sank Adam's Apple deep in a setting of hiccups and I was still scattering them about as I backed out. One cannot go burburping all over the lot and call a Lady Agatha off her perch.

The Sweet and Lowdown

One sweetly solemn thought about these miniature pancake hats the women are wearing is that miniature golf was once a popular rage among the feeble-minded, too.

A diplomat is a man who can make a woman believe that the reason he's late for a date is because he was so thrilled at the thought of seeing her that he forgot to look at the time.

Somehow, a room done in modernistic furniture always reminds you of "Technocracy." It is colder than a debutante's smile, harder than a racketeer's conscience—and about as cozy as an operating table.

I WAS SO THRILLED AT TH' THOUGHT OF SEEING YOU--I FORGOT TO LOOK AT TH' TIME !

The difficulty, with which a bridegroom chokes out his first false alibi, is exceeded only by the ease with which they slip out, after he has acquired a little practice.

WELL-ER-- YOU--SEE DEAR--YOU KNOW-ER JOE--ER WHAT'S HIS NAME-WELL--ETC !

The bride who is jealous of her husband's past should look up a few of the glamorous girls he has been bragging about and see what a lot of "seconds" she worked so hard to beat to the altar.

It's a cinch that no modern youth will ever live on hash and half-portions in order to leave his wife rich enough to afford a face lift, with which to catch his successor.

Just what are the younger novelists going to do for a "hero?" The smart young broker who "turned the trick" and married the Boss's daughter is out; the gigolo can't live at the present rates of alimony—and the clever gangster "with a kind heart" (which beat behind a couple of guns) has been overdone.
